Subtle ENERGIES

A Buddha statue is the central focus, surrounded by a vibrant, multi-colored aura of light. The aura consists of numerous fine, radiating lines in shades of purple, blue, and pink. Two large, glowing handprints are visible on either side of the Buddha's head, also emitting light. The background is dark, making the glowing elements stand out prominently.

The great minds of our time are bringing a new renaissance. The fusion of ideas, disciplines, and cultures has always advanced civilization, be it from the renaissance of the Middle East to Middle Ages of Europe, again, we stand at this crossroad. The new convergence of leading-edge science and ancient wisdom is bridging the heart and mind, science and spirituality, and East and West.

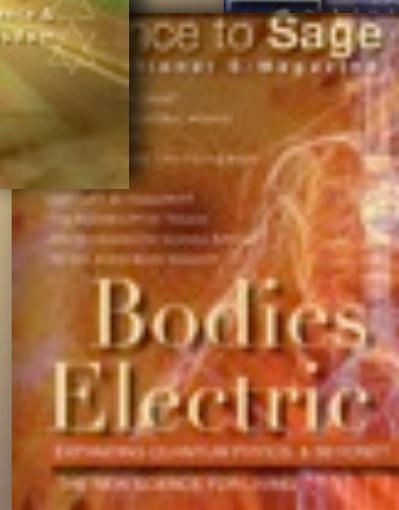

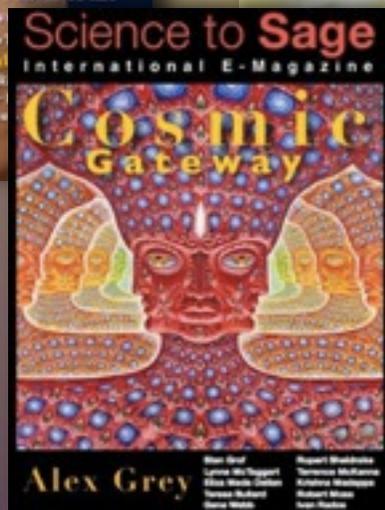

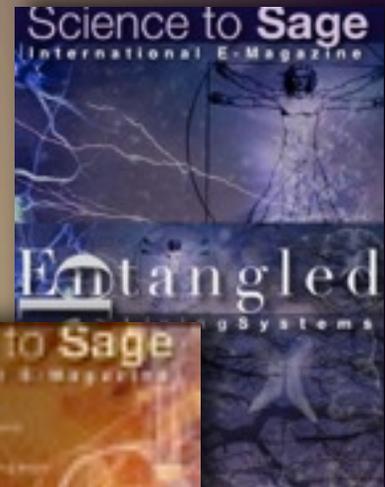

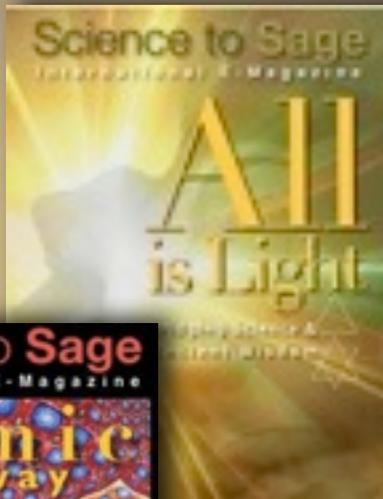

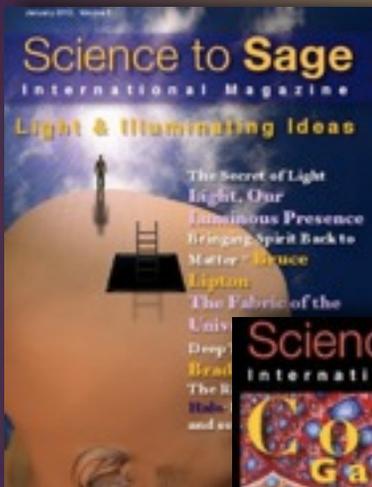

Take a quantum leap in your understanding of the mysteries of our universe.

Science to Sage E-Magazine is rated 5 star each month by our readers. And now join me on Science to Sage Radio at the awakeningzone.com. Most shows are live. We host the 1st and 3rd Tuesday of month, 12pm central time.

THE SPECTRAL DOMAIN

THE RECIPROCAL SPACE OF SUBTLE ENERGY

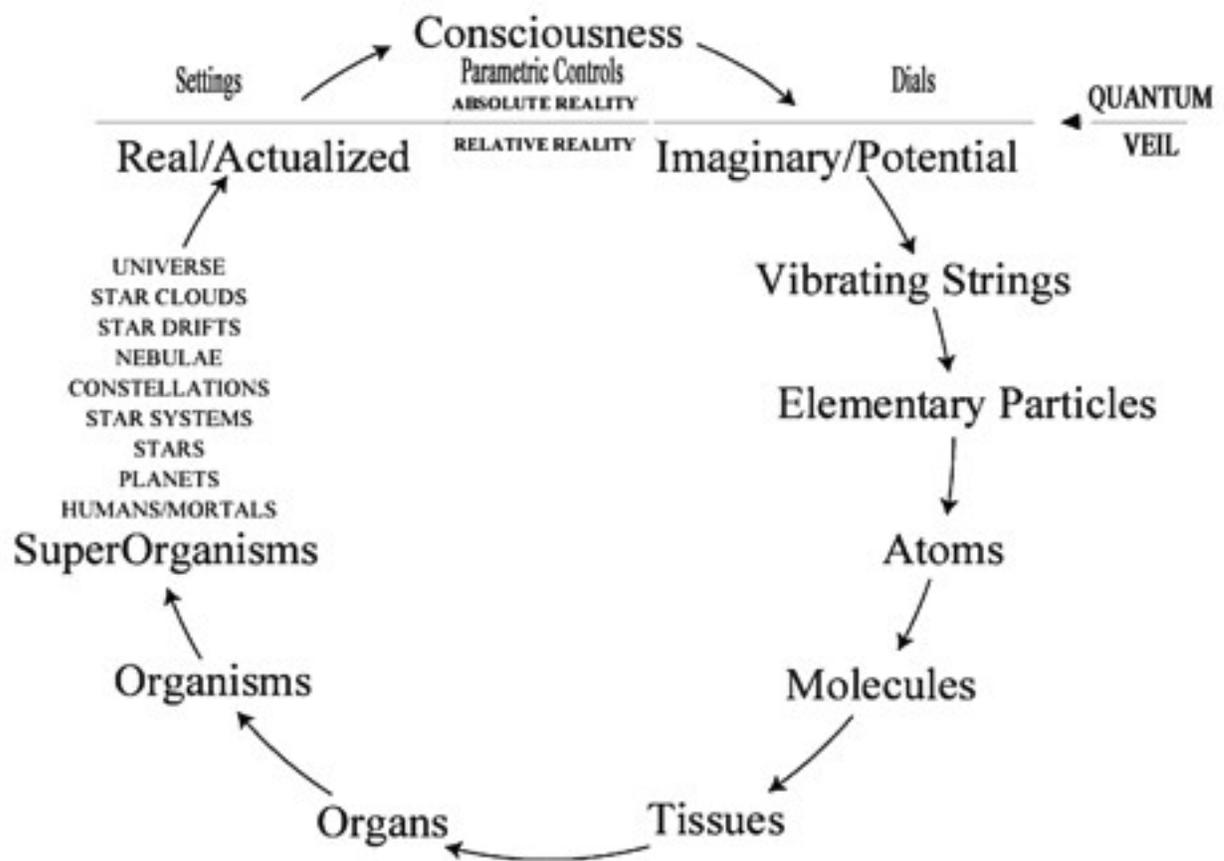

For years the concept of “subtle energy” has been tossed around as if it’s an actual manifested reality. Lectures have been given and paper after paper has been published about the effects of these subtle energies, so called because no one has been able to actually measure them except secondarily through the effects they produce. If they exist where are they?

We came to this question during a 15-year research project into the true nature of reality and its most primary, fundamental level...a place in mathematics called...Origin. At this highest level of math, everything in the universe is a specific distance and direction from origin. The history of finding one’s way back to origin is their journey to destiny.

THE NESTED STRUCTURE OF REALITY

To find origin, it is necessary to follow the decimal construction of reality back to its original source. With regard to the physical universe this is called the “nested structure” of cosmic reality and it can be graphically illustrated as below:

...finding one's way back to origin is their journey to destiny.

BY DON ESTES

FROM HARMONIC LAW: THE SCIENCE OF VIBRATION

Super-organisms like human beings are encircuited within this cycle of manifestation. Between the elements that make up our bodies and our connection to original source via the silver cord back through all of our ancestors...we consist of all of these frequencies. There are no so-called “missing frequencies”, just those that are stressed or in need of support.

The scale of manifested reality runs from the Quantum constant on the right, which provides the building materials, to the Gravity constant on the left, which draws and holds all of the parts into one Whole. Observing this scale it is easy to see how these small parts gather and arrange themselves into larger and more sophisticated arrangements until the whole is eventuated. The potency of origin begins to slow as it steps down into the primary particles that make up the atoms that combine to form the molecules that arrange themselves into the cells that comprise the tissues that form the membranes of the organs of a super-organism like a human being. This complement of eight steps forms a full octave of manifestation.

On the other side moving toward a larger whole, humans are connected to the gravity constant through the physical, mental, and spiritual circuits of DNA all the way back through the millennia of ancestors to original source. This personality circuit is an individual's own private connection back to Origin, and returning to it is the essence of Destiny.

Modern science is beginning to give credence to the idea that a large part of reality is hidden away from us beyond the quantum/gravity veil. In fact, all of physics is currently engaged in defining the “theory of everything” that explains how universal manifestation originally occurred and in resolving the mathematical discrepancies between the laws of gravity and quantum mechanics. Their “big-bang, superstring, membrane, gravity and four forces of nature” stories are beginning to unravel in the face of the stochastic nature of chaos theory, which redefines the four forces of physics as “attractors” and better describes the true nature of what is going on. All of these theories are focused on what is called direct space. However, evidence is mounting for the existence of a separate inverse space that balances and stabilizes the one we live in.

This, as yet unaddressed, indirect space is called the spectral domain, in differentiation from the time domain in which we live. A real world example of this is to consider an instrument like a violin sitting in its case, representing a full potential of melodies inherent within its “resounding body of resonant frequencies”. In other words, it contains within its own body a unique, one of a kind spectral signature.

“RESOUNDING BODY OF RESONANT FREQUENCIES”

The timbre produced by this instrument is distinct and will sound the same no matter who plays it. However, when a musician picks it up and begins to interact with it, changes are made to the instrument over time as the strings are drawn or plucked, keys are stuck, pedals are pumped and other actions are taken on the part of the player as they attempt to interact and become one with the instrument. The result is music and its beauty and sophistication are directly proportional to the integration of player and instrument. The more integration...the more beautiful and synchronous the music will be. Every thing, event, and situation has this time and spectral duality, which can only be resolved by an observer who is watching, listening, feeling or otherwise sensing the outcome.

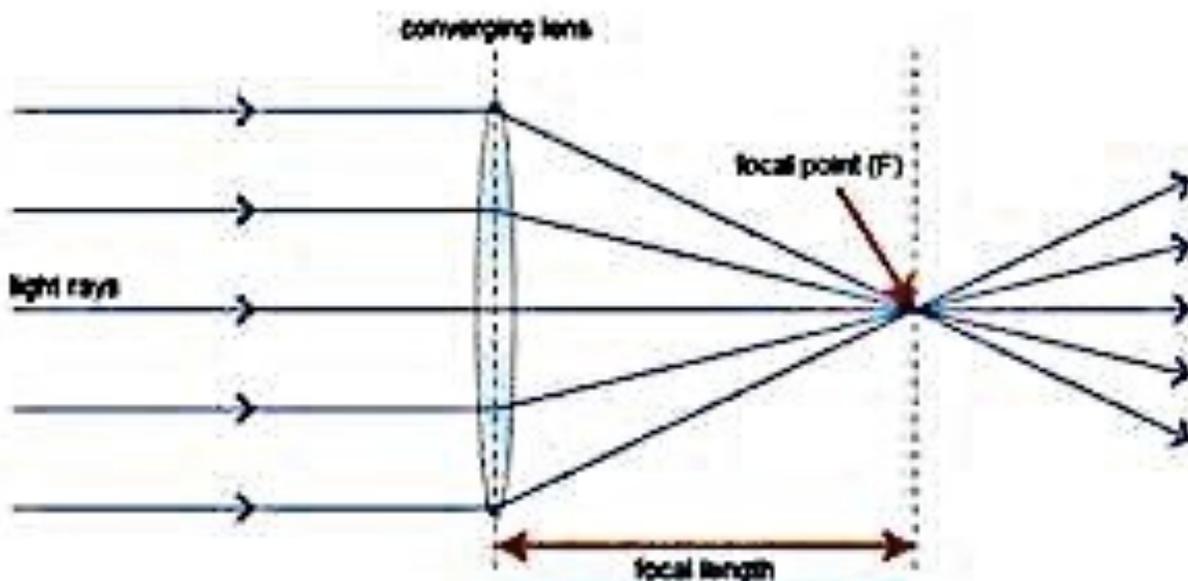

This is true of human beings as well. Part of us has already actualized (body, mind and spirit), but another part lies hidden in the potential of our future choices and universal fate. The better integrated we are between our actual and potential selves, the more beautiful our music becomes. I've written many papers on the mechanics of how intention originates in the spectral domain and how it manifests itself in the time domain, but that is not the purpose of this paper. Rather, what we are discussing here is the difference between the spectral domain beyond the quantum and the time domain we live in on this side of the veil.

Some of the leading scientists are beginning to realize that there is another universe that balances out the energy of the one we live in...a mirror universe some say...dark energy and dark matter others declare. This is bringing them to the unmistakable conclusion that there is indeed an "other side" as has always been reported by the sages and spiritual leaders throughout the ages, who have given it many names like paradise, heaven, nirvana and the void.

We call this unseen realm of reality the spectral domain and have shown that instead of being a mirror image of direct space, it is rather a reciprocal space. A reciprocal is the part of something that is needed to make the other parts add up to one, or in other words...become whole. Any real thing that's not totally complete and unified in the time domain has an imaginary reciprocal part on the other side in the spectral domain...its hidden potential that still remains shrouded in the mystery of potential. Getting to this domain to discover the missing part of one's true self is the essence of spiritual transformation and human transcendence to a higher level of order. Such a journey often takes many lifetimes to achieve. Subtle energies are the way in.

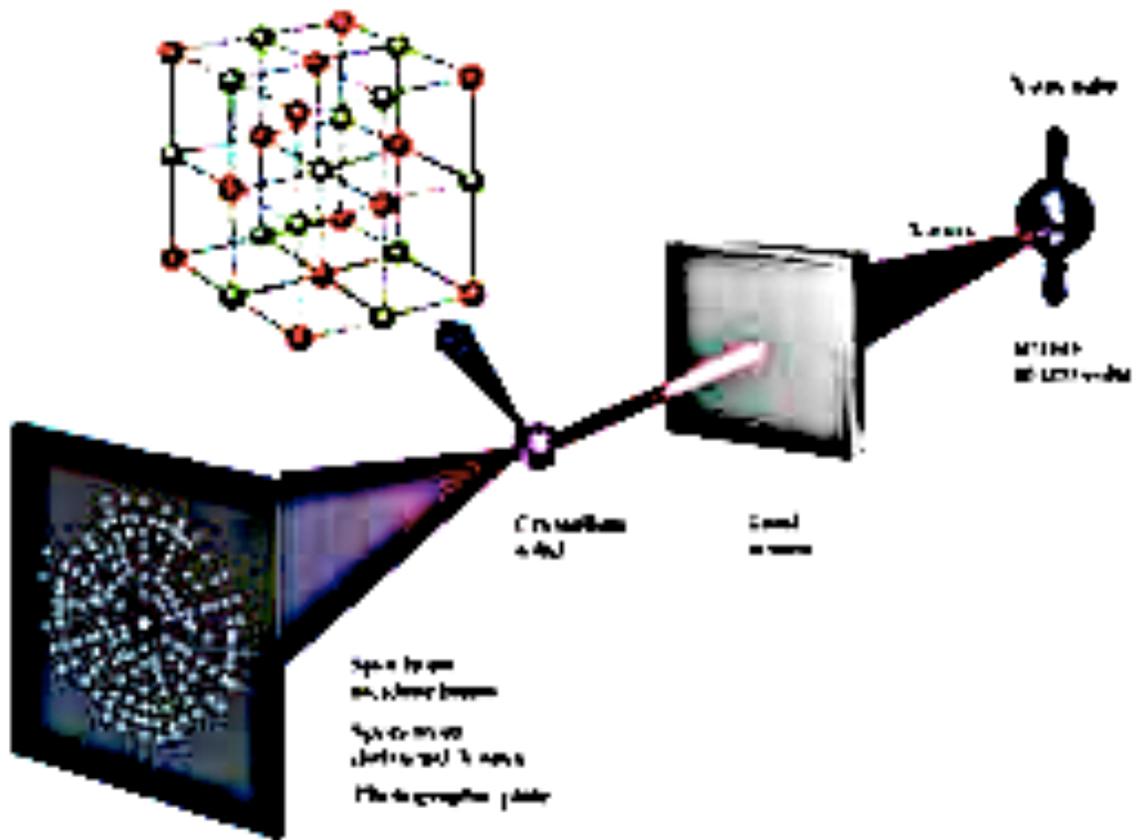

Problems occurring in the time domain are heterogeneous and have many aspects to themselves such as physical, mental/emotional and spiritual factors. However, the spectral domain is homogenous. The only variance there is the ever-changing relationship between the real and imaginary, actual and potential components. Creating change at this primary level of reality provides a much more elegant and efficient way of effecting true and lasting change upon an individual or group. Collapsing the wave function by learning how to combine these two elements together is the secret of being able to create one's own reality. We have demonstrated that all geometry, including the so-called sacred ones are constructed from combinations of these two components, which represent the smallest, most indivisible building blocks of reality.

Dr. William Tiller gives a good description of the reciprocal world in many of his books and lectures. But, the question remains... where is this world? There is such little information about it that it's really hard to know where to start looking. Is it right in front of us but invisible? Is it an actual location in space somehow hidden from view or perhaps even a different dimension? One thing we do know about the spectral domain is that it is dimensionless, that is, has zero dimension. The only real place a zero dimension could be found is at the focal point of light as it passes through a lens. At that point where the light converges at the crossover point, it becomes dimensionless, a singularity, before diverging back into light rays with dimension.

All of the information that makes up an individual is contained within that zero-dimensional point. It's possible to extrapolate the essence of that information into direct space, for the purposes of perception and analysis, by allowing it to expand and populate a real world topology. Scientists are beginning to understand this and find ways of seeing what's going on in the quantum world. In physics, for example, to observe the quantum structure of a crystal, they blast it with high-energy light and put a screen on the other side. The light is diffracted and the resulting projected light produces an image that reveals the atomic structure inside.

In a reverse, but somewhat similar way, Dr. Tiller shows how to see a spectral domain image of a time domain object in his book, The Science of Human Transformation... his treatise on the science of subtle energy. In the book he shows how diffraction gratings can be used to make such an image. If you punch a hole in a thick piece of paper, shine a light through the hole and put a projection screen on the other side, the hole becomes a lens and its size and shape diffract the light going through and create mandala like patterns on the screen.

The position, color and shape of the diffraction grating can further affect the resulting image:

All three shapes in the spectral domain.

If this process is used to further populate a dynamic 3D real world structure instead of a static 2D picture the real time living spectral essence can be viewed as a matrix. The topology of choice for modeling a dynamic reality is the torus as it can represent a three-dimensional system changing over time via torsion. Above is a graphic diagram of a quantum biofeedback process that uses this method of dynamic modeling to describe the pre-quantum state of a person's stated intention.

The user states an intention into the process by whispering, speaking, gesturing, toning, singing or otherwise expressing themselves into the process, all the noise is removed, the partials are separated into their real and imaginary components that are returned to separate ears such that the brain must resolve the difference between the two signals.

SPECTRAL ESSENCE MATRICES FROM LIVE SESSIONS

Simultaneously, these same partials are used to make a diffraction grating of their phase space, pure light is shined through it to a lens which refocuses the image into a one-dimensional point and focused at the vertex (central singularity) of a torus, which is then torsioned to populate its surface and unfolded into a two-dimensional image that can be viewed as a cross-section. In this manner, all of the dimensions of a spectral domain reality can be viewed as a time domain object. In other words, these spectral essence matrices are physical evidence of the existence of the subtle energies hidden in reciprocal space.

All human suffering stems from the difference between the real and imaginary parts of our lives. This difference creates a tension, which functions as a black hole that draws in any resonant energy that can help to resolve the difference and tension. A process like this can allow anyone to become the observer of their own reality and learn how to resolve the difference and tension between those two different aspects of themselves. This results in a release of the tension, reduced incidents of drawing in unwanted energy, epiphanies, actualization of hidden potential and ultimately to a higher level of order...transformation from a physical evolutionary creature into a spiritual existential essence...a process call Allasso.

In summary, the spectral domain is the realm and dominion of the so-called subtle energies. These energies can be observed by passing light through a time-domain diffraction grating of the phase space of a real world object, event, situation or stated intention to reveals what kind of spectra it absorbs, reflects, transmits and diffracts.

The resulting matrix can reveal a person's true inner and outer radiance, state of resolution, degree of harmony, geometric patterning, time orientation, energy distribution, manifesting capabilities, music correlation, and other information about their manner of being and doing. These subtle energies can also be heard by reducing the partials of an expression down to the most primary level of reality, separating the real and imaginary components and then requiring the brain to reassemble them through the recombination of binaural phase, which represent a person's true inner-voice. So, all one needs to experience these elusive energies is to shed so much light on every aspect of their life such that nothing can hide, all is revealed, and begin to integrate and become one with the instrument that they inhabit. Take a lens to your manner of being and doing, and have good look at what is going on, on the other side your life, behind the scenes... acknowledge the need to change, give up all resistance, identify and remove all unwholesomeness in the way...and then take faith by burning the old bridge and stepping out to your next highest level of order. Give as much regard to the Inverse as you do the Universe.

ABOUT JON DEPEW

I have been researching energy on my own for many years. I do my own experiments as to confirm or disprove my own thoughts pertaining to energy. This technique of doing experiments of my own conception and not just replicating others experiments, has enabled me to uncover some very important and original discoveries which is now changing science on a daily basis.

There are many self imposed restrictions scientists have placed on themselves, and thus causing science not to progress forward as quickly as it should have.

Doing my own work and absorbing anything I felt was relative to TRUTH in regards to Energy is how I advanced to a level that has been overwhelming in rewarding and truthful knowledge.

I've studied through the years a few great researchers of energy from history such as Nikola Tesla , Edward Leedskalnin , Albert Cushing Crehore among others.

I only absorbed and focused my attention on what I felt were TRUTHS within all my reading, and original experimenting of my own design. Then one night doing some physical scientific experiments, I saw something in my magnetic work similar to the ancient Flower of Life design.

This instantly made me realize that all of Sacred Geometry was really the SEGMENTED BLUEPRINTS to MAGNETIC ENERGIES .. This conclusion also tied together some work of Ed Leedskalnin, an immigrant from Latvia and the builder of the Coral Castle or also known as Rock Gate. An amazing multi-ton hand carved coral stone complex located in Homestead Florida.

Ed Leedskalnin had left a subtle visual design on the cover of one of his small self published booklets entitled "MAGNETIC CURRENT". This was a design showing two flexible curves seen in many ancient designs and architectures.

So on my own, I took those two curves and proved my conclusions of Sacred Geometry being the Blueprints of Magnetic energies. I proved it visually , mathematically, and most importantly in real working PHYSICAL SCIENTIFIC DEMONSTRATIONS.

Light & Death

THE ESOTERIC BELIEFS, THE OCCULT BELIEFS, AND THE RELIGIOUS TEACHINGS OF ALL TIMES AND OF ALL PEOPLES CONCUR THAT DEATH DOES NOT TERMINATE THE LIFE OF THE SOUL.

According to various doctrines, existence of the soul after death can take different forms. However, all doctrines are agreed that there exists a tie between one's earthly life and one's afterlife of the soul, and the latter is the continuation of the former on a different level.

The soul does not leave the body at once. Various terms have been assigned to this process by different doctrines, generally from two to nine days. Within this period, the soul is connected with the body. Sometimes the soul is able to return into the body, and the person can be revived for a further life on Earth. In the vast majority of cases, however, the transfer of the soul irreversible. The soul undergoes a transformation, and acquires a new spiritual experience, which determines the soul's further existence. Even so, the soul continues to be connected with the body it has left.

ALL BELIEFS ON THE AFTERLIFE OF THE SOUL ELICIT RESPONSE, SUPPORT, AND CONFIRMATION BY THE CONTEMPORARY SCIENTIFIC THOUGHT AND PRACTICE.

EXCERPTS FROM

Light After Light

BY PROF. KONSTANTIN KOROTKOV

THE PROCESS OF DEATH, WHICH WE WOULD CALL TRANSITION TO GREATER AWARENESS, CAN BE SEEN AS A PROCESS IN THE ENERGETIC FIELD.

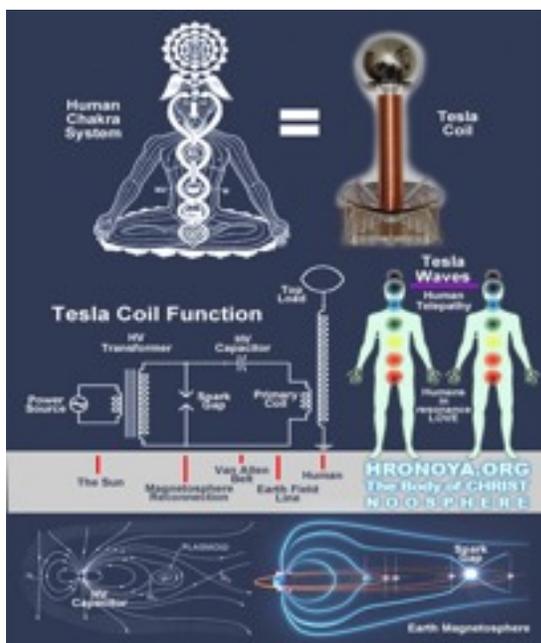

There is a washing of a field, there is a clearing, an opening of all the chakras. When you die, you are going to another dimension. There is dissolution in the three lower chakras. There is dissolution of the three lower bodies. When an individual dies, a trained person can see the opalescent quality of the hands, of the face, of the skin. It is opalescent mother of pearl as the individual is dying, and the beautiful opalescent clouds are wafting off. Those clouds are the lower energy bodies which serve to hold the physical body together. They are disintegrating, they waft off, and the chakras there are opened and there are cords of energy coming out. The upper chakras are great openings into other dimensions. This is the beginning stage of death where the energy field separates: the lower parts from the upper. Then, during the three hours or so after the hour of death, there is a washing of the body, a spiritual baptism where the energy is flushed through like a fountain right up the main vertical power current. A fountain of golden light flushes through, and all of the blocks are cleansed.

Transition

Opening of the Chakras

Does not this description correlate with the phenomena investigated by us ? Bursts of energy, strongest in the first hours after death, energy fountain, opening of all chakras. This idea allows us to formulate the model of gas discharge visualization process as follows. Chakras for a living person are entrance channels of energy, accepting it from the Universal Energy Field. A healthy person has all chakras and he perceives Universe energy flows, feeding and energizing his spirit and body. This is represented on discharge photos as a smooth powerful glow. At the same time, this glow corresponds to the condition of the organism which has already accepted and processed this energy; therefore, discharge glow varies with a change in conditions. It characterizes the passing of energy from chakras along the channels. The same takes place with any biological object as it exchanges energy with surrounding space. Inanimate objects also absorb energy, but they only channel it, absorbing a part of it without changing it. There is total analogy with absorption of warmth which is really part of the Universal Energy Field. Structured objects such as crystals structure this energy near their surface, but this structuring is constant. In the process of illness, partial or total blocking of one chakra or another occurs. This results in energy blocking that causes the failures in discharge glow. We observed patients with a practical absence of glow. When chakras begin to operate in the opposite direction, that is they do not absorb but rather dump energy, it is followed by discharge glow bursts. But strong peaks at our curves were caused by exactly such bursts! Does this not confirm the idea that after death, energy leaves the body for some time as if flows away from it, and when the energy tank is empty the body begins to channel energy as any inanimate object.

However, the glow structure of this object corresponds to the energy of the body skeleton. Discharge glow displays the structure of an object as it displays the structure of a crystal or the inside structure of a dielectric. Therefore glow types for different groups are distinguished. But as compared to a living body glow, this glow remains constant from picture to picture without varying for a provocatively long time.

AN INTERESTING QUESTION: DO DISCHARGE PHOTOS DISPLAY PARTICULAR FEATURES OF THE FUNCTIONING OF VARIOUS CHAKRAS ?

A person is shown from the waist up, with arms outstretched horizontally. The person's body is semi-transparent, revealing a vertical beam of light that passes through them. This beam is composed of a spectrum of colors: purple at the top, followed by blue, cyan, green, yellow, and red at the bottom. The background is dark, with a bright light source at the top center, creating a lens flare effect. The overall image conveys a sense of energy being released or leaving the body.

body for some time
as if flowing away from it...

no boundaries

The second important conclusion seems to be the already mentioned lack of substantial difference between the glow of the dead and the living bodies.

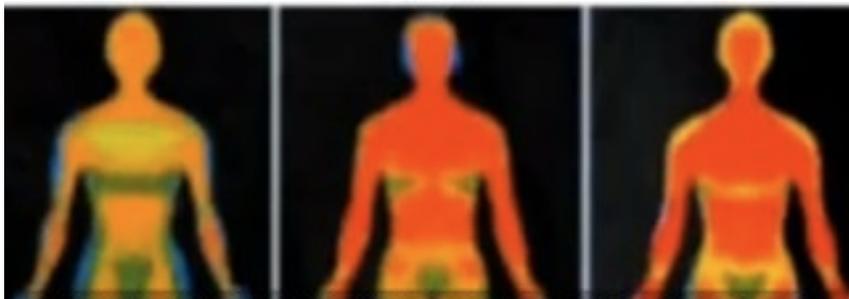

THIS MAY BE INTERPRETED AS EXPERIMENTAL PROOF OF THE ABSENCE OF THE BASIC BOUNDARY BETWEEN THE STATES OF LIFE AND DEATH; THAT IS, AS A PROOF OF A GRADUAL AND SMOOTH TRANSITION FROM ONE STATE TO THE OTHER.

This conclusion agrees well with numerous esoteric and mystical ideas, and suggests that after death, the frail body, or ethereal body, or soul departs gradually from the physical one. An entirely different question is how irreversible this process is—which moment is the point of no return, and exactly when is the last moment when these two substances—the physical body and the soul—are connected together? One might try to answer the latter question on the basis of our data, but the former question will require much searching.

After

...which moment is the point of no
return?

The big problem is to solve the secret of the brain: what is it—a subject or an object ? A container of brain and soul or their only source? Shall we be able to keep the soul after a replacement of a part of the brain? Answers to these questions are likely to begin in the near future, but all teachings agree on the point that the soul can leave the body, exist outside it, perceive sensations, see other worlds and then come back into the body to continue the earthly existence.

OVER THE CENTURIES THESE IDEAS MARKED A BOUNDARY LINE BETWEEN TWO PHILOSOPHIC SCHOOLS: IDEALISM AND MATERIALISM.

For the followers of materialism all speculations about the soul always related to legends and fantasy, they explained this idea as the representation of human fear before the hostile nature, as their attempts to stand above the animal world. In any society poets and storytellers were appreciated and honored. And all religions were no more than canonized folk tales. Matter is primary; spirit is the generation of the same matter, product of brain activity, complicated structure, having new quality owing to a certain organization level. A computer comparable in complexity of its structure to the human brain in the near future will be able to compose verses independently, to make decisions and to demonstrate character. When a computer is turned off or when the brain is dead, everything is over—only matter exists!

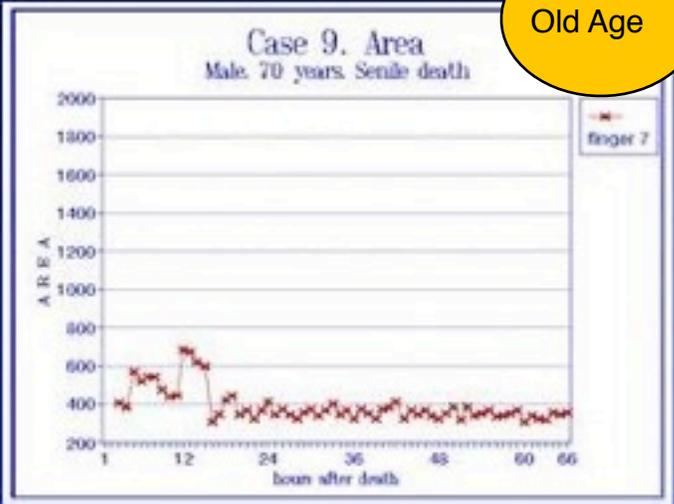

AT THE PRESENT LEVEL OF KNOWLEDGE IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO RESOLVE THIS DISPUTE. NEITHER PARTY CAN GIVE ANY UNEQUIVOCAL PROOF OF THEIR POINT OF VIEW.

The question of the brain, its is subject or object?

His scientific line, known as the Electrophotonics, is based on Gas Discharge Visualization technique (GDV), is a breakthrough beyond Kirlian photography for direct, real-time viewing of the human energy fields. This new technology allows one to capture by a special camera the physical, emotional, mental and spiritual energy emanating to and from an individual, plants, liquids, powders, inanimate objects and translate this into a computerized model. This allows researcher and client to see imbalances that may be influencing an individual's well-being greatly facilitating the diagnosis of the CAUSE of any existing imbalances showing the area of the body and the organ systems involved.

THE VEIL IS LIFTING

EFFECTING THE FLOW OF BOTH TIME AND SPACE

They are circular shaped visual phenomenon showing up in hundreds of thousands of photos in a myriad of different settings, under all kinds of conditions. These mystifying “orbs” have attracted attention in both the scientific and spiritual communities all over the world.

Some orb enthusiasts theorize that these spherical lights have been with us for centuries, possibly the source of our belief in angels, fairies, or other paranormal intelligence. They could be the inspiration for the halos shown around the heads of spiritual teachers in classic paintings. With the introduction of digital photography, these bright balls of energy are no longer confined to religious art and sacred mythology.

Dr. Ledwith's personal collection of orbs is well over 100,000 images. He is the co-author of "The Orb Project". His DVD "Orbs: Clues to a More Exciting Universes" .

Although orbs have previously appeared up in photos taken with traditional film cameras, it has only been since point and shoot digital cameras moved into the mainstream that photographers have been able to consistently record them. Many believe that, since digital cameras are more sensitive to the infrared section of the electromagnetic spectrum, they are able to "see" slightly beyond what is visible to the naked eye.

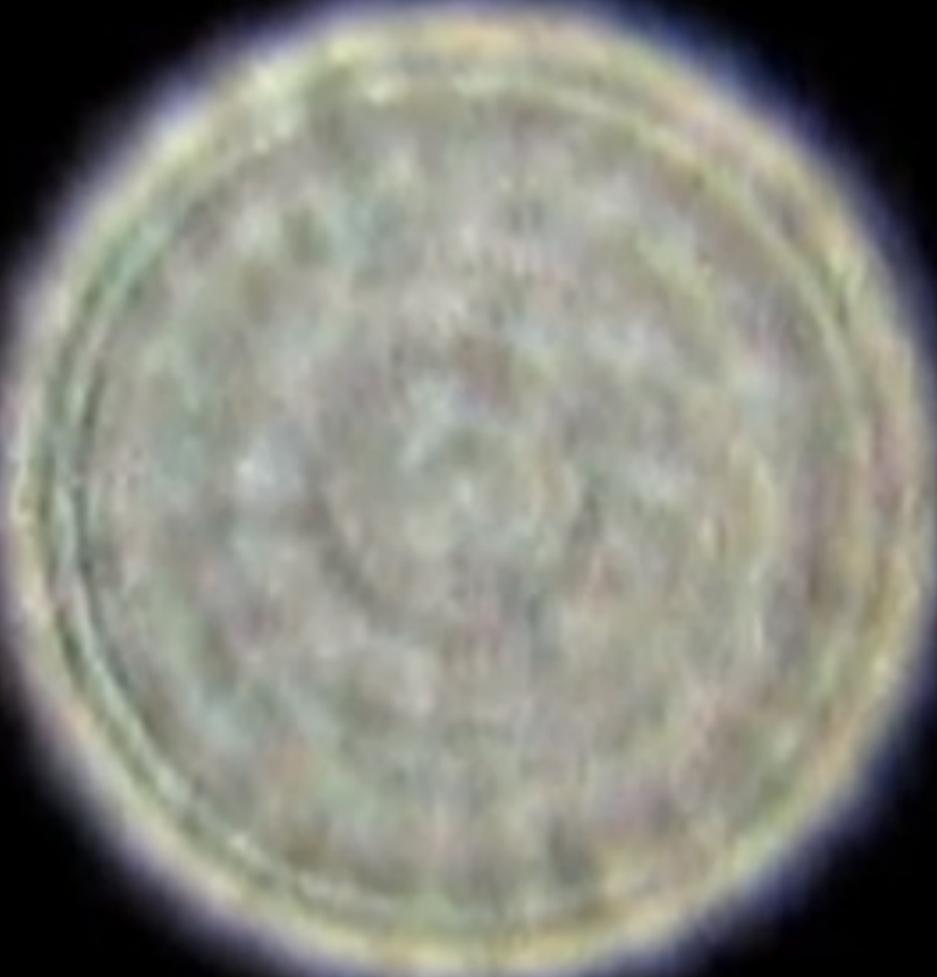

However, even with the aid of our new cameras, it appears that it may take something of a leap of faith to make contact. Photographing orbs may require a shift from an "I'll believe it when I see it" attitude towards the unknown, to an "I'll see it when I believe" it perspective. That, along with a good camera and a working flash is all that's necessary to become an orb photographer, says Miceal Ledwith, co-author with Klaus Heinemann, of The Orb Project. With over 300,000 orb photos in his collection, Ledwith speaks from experience.

"You don't need to be a guru, a mystic, an avatar, or specially favored by God to see an orb," he says. "All you need is a cheap digital camera and an open mind."

It may also help to have a basic understanding of how we process what we see.

Ledwith explains that "the brain comes into play in human seeing and we don't see all that's out there. We only take in 10 percent of the information coming in through the lens of the eye.

“we are living in a frequency-based universe” That means, he says, that “these are beings just outside of our present dimension of frequency. - Micheal Ledwith

The other 90 percent is rejected by the brain which focuses only on stuff we want to help us with everyday living such as food, bringing the children to school, paying the mortgage, etc. Orbs obviously don't fit into that category so we don't see them. The difference between looking at something and seeing it involves an act of consciousness by the brain. You can convey to your brain that you are interested in seeing orbs."

Both men are experienced researchers with extensive backgrounds in both science and spirituality.

Heinemann is a physicist and former NASA researcher. Ledwith, a theologian and former president of Maynooth College in Ireland, served on the International Theological Commission at the Vatican for 17 years. Neither Heinemann nor Ledwith accepted what they were seeing in their photos without considerable skepticism, and both took painstaking efforts to validate their results.

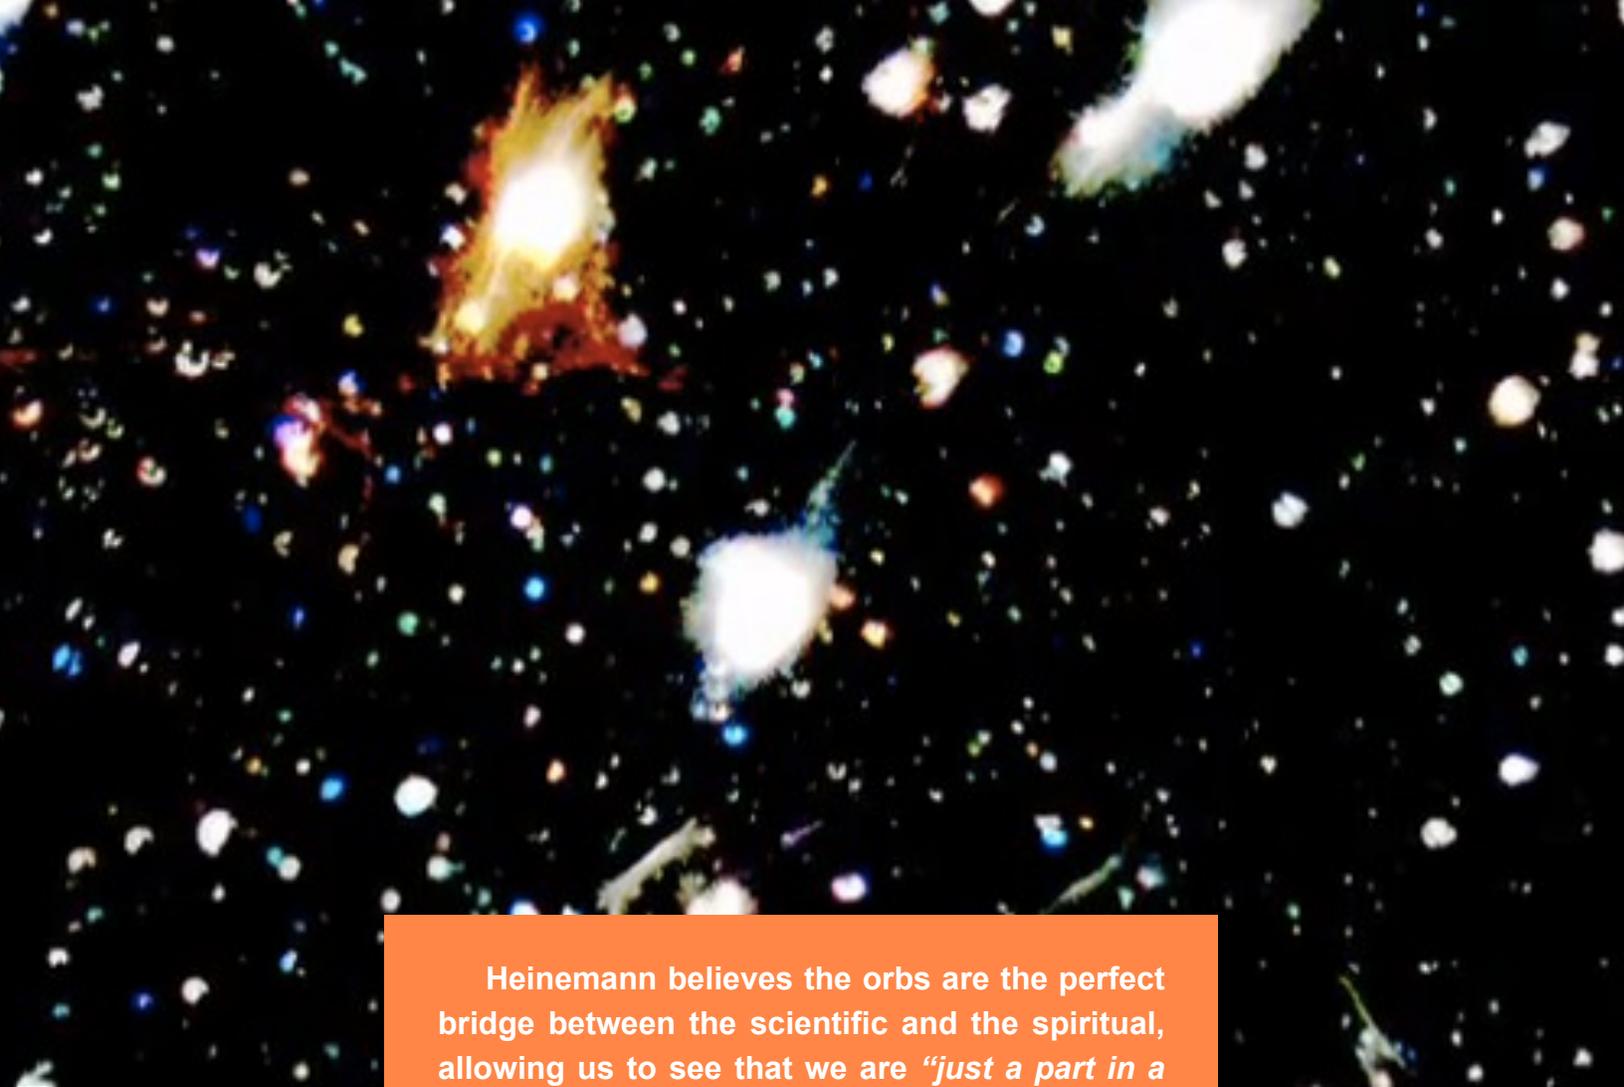

Although many critics have dismissed orbs as dust particles, water droplets, or even tiny insects that have wandered into the camera's field, the evidence indicates otherwise.

"I devoted a lot of time and research to make sure I was on solid ground and I wasn't dealing with easily explainable phenomena," says Heinemann. However, that doesn't mean "fake" orb photos don't exist. Although he concedes that it certainly is possible for natural phenomenon to produce occasional orb-like effects, he is quick to point out that the overwhelming number of orb photos that now exist make this explanation highly implausible.

For the skeptics, Heinemann offers a series of indicators that can authenticate orb photos. For example, he says, if a photograph shows an orb that is positioned behind another object, it essentially rules out the possibility of water or dust on the lens of the camera. He also classifies as authentic photographs that show orbs that change size and move from one location to another in successive shots. Equally hard to dismiss are photos of extremely bright orbs that are easily visible without digital enhancement, or orb photos taken in the same location at the same time by different cameras. The multitudes of photos that depict orbs in strategic locations such as at the elbow of a healer or the mouth also defy "logical" explanation.

Some skeptics also suggest that orb photos are the result of image manipulation. However, Ledwith explains, because the camera's EXIF (exchangeable image file format) log tracks all changes made to the original picture, it is extremely difficult to successfully fake an orb photo.

Heinemann believes the orbs are the perfect bridge between the scientific and the spiritual, allowing us to see that we are “just a part in a huge continuum of consciousness and conscious beings.” -

These strategies apparently work. Both Ledwith and Heinemann have captured thousands of orbs of every size and color in their massive array of photos. However, these researchers are not shooting orb photos for the sole purpose of adding more and more spectacular images to their impressive collections. They believe the orbs are much more than a curiosity; that they have both a meaning and a purpose.

Inspired by their orb experiences which, between the two of them, comprise over 12 years of concentrated study, Ledwith and Heinemann have come to their own separate conclusions about the true nature of the orbs they photograph.

Heinemann believes the orbs are the perfect bridge between the scientific and the spiritual, allowing us to see that we are “just a part in a huge continuum of consciousness and conscious beings.”

He says the orbs are Spirit beings, or more correctly, Spirit emanations. “They are emanations from a Spirit being,” he explains, rather than the entirety of that being. “I liken it,” he says, “to a person using a flashlight. Standing in the dark, you as the observer only see the flashlight — you don’t see the person. That person could be moving that flashlight around and even shining it in your camera. You could say that person is directing the flashlight and it is emanating from that person, but there is so much more to them than just what you see.”

Are digital cameras the vehicles for providing us with at least the initial answers to these intriguing questions?

It all remains to be seen, of course – both literally and figuratively.

LEDWITH CONCLUDES

...that, “Orbs are, basically, at least in the first form in which we become aware of them, what you and I would be without the physical body.”

He further suggests that, “we are living in a frequency-based universe” That means, he says, that “these are beings just outside of our present dimension of frequency. They belong to a realm where you and I have been many times before we come back into a physical incarnation.”

Ledwith explains the implications of his conclusion through comparing human beings to icebergs — 1/8 of which are above the surface while the rest is hidden below. “The part of us which is beneath the surface exists in all of the various dimensions.”

DOES THIS MEAN THAT ORB ENCOUNTERS ARE PAVING THE WAY TO A GREATER UNDERSTANDING OF THE NATURE OF THE UNIVERSE?

EXPLORING ENERGY FIELDS

any biological essence gives to this glow

Around an object, placed in a special electrode system producing a high intensity electric field, there appears a gas discharge whose glow one may see and photograph. The discharge appears independently of the nature of the object; therefore, having a certain experimental skill one can cause practically any object to glow—a nail, a stone or a plant; any biological essence gives to this glow its own specific contribution, changing its brightness, size and color. So the discharge reveals features of an object that can't be determined with other techniques and allows one to track its small changes. Put a pinch of salt into candle flame—and you see its color change. Something similar takes place in our case.

THE ELECTRICAL PROPERTIES OF THE OBJECT, EMISSION CHARACTERISTICS, GAS PRODUCTION, ENERGY EXCHANGE WITH ENVIRONMENT—ALL THESE PARAMETERS OF THE OBJECT UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS ARE DISPLAYED ON THE PHOTOS.

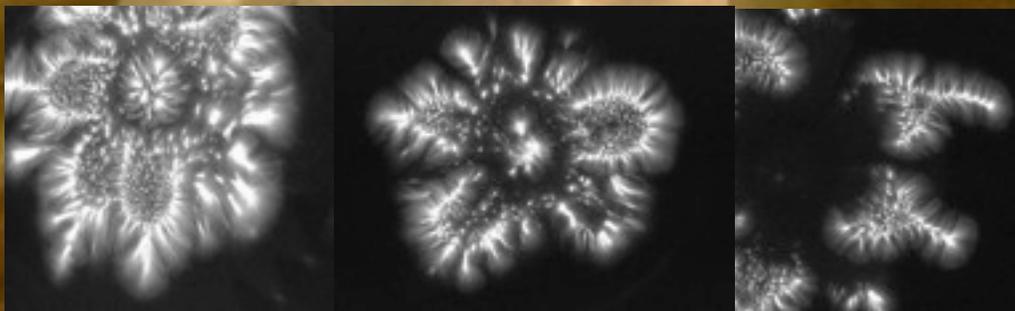

For the complex object it is not always possible to distinguish the influence of one factor or another, that is, the method permits to reveal the complex organism reaction to different influences. All attempts to reduce the reasons of the glow to sweating or conductivity only, after careful verification appeared to be incorrect. Research showed that photographing is not the only method of the Kirlian glow registration. Valuable information is received during the measurement of integrated glow or the current rate enabling one to receive the data in real time mode.

The energy rising from the Earth is electrical in nature, and the energy from the cosmos is magnetic in nature. The interaction of the two creates an electromagnetic field which forms around the body as shown. Your body is electrical and magnetic. Flowing up from the Earth is the electrical energy which flows into your Pingala channel. However, electrical energy also enters the physical through the dark energy subtle systems.

THE SECRET LIFE OF WALK-INS

One of the first concepts one must accept "on faith" when embarking on a spiritual path is that of a soul being separate and distinct from the physical body that contains it. Not only is this one of the fundamental similarities shared by many of the established religions of the world, but it is also one of the few places where the New Thought movement is wholeheartedly in agreement with the religious establishment. There is much discussion surrounding how and when a soul enters the body during birth, and ultimately what happens to the soul after death, but there is a general agreement that the separation of soul and body is both fundamental and regarded in a positive manner.

by Scott Blum

However, there is substantially less agreement surrounding the fascinating subject of what happens when more than one soul inhabits a single physical body. Part of the reason for this dissent is the negative connotations associated with the concept of possession. For years, Hollywood horror films have sensationalized the event of a body being taken over against its will, which is akin to a forced metaphysical assault.

The kinder, gentler sibling to possession is known as a Walk-In. It is accepted that a Walk-In stems from an agreement between the two souls, oftentimes made before the physical body is born. From a human perspective, what this means is that a body is "taken over" when the previous inhabitant is finished with their time on Earth and is no longer interested in continuing on.

Trailer: www.walkinthemovie.com

Those familiar with Walk-Ins describe the initial experience as a distinct shift of personality or thought patterns following a traumatic event or miraculous recovery from a severe illness. The subject is subsequently less concerned with their own challenges, and uncharacteristically begins to show a preoccupation with the burdens of others. Walk-Ins are further described as having an inner poise or quiet radiance and are genuinely interested in helping humanity, without establishing overly close ties with individuals. They also tend to emotionally distance themselves from previous friends and loved ones.

It is understood that Walk-Ins come to a host body for two fundamental reasons: the first is to help the individual complete their tasks on Earth that they were not willing or able to do; and secondarily, to accomplish the Walk-In's own work on this planet. This work is typically more focused than a traditional soul's work, which is why utilizing a body that is already mature is desirable for a Walk-In. And although the learning opportunities inherent in being born, developing language and motor skills, and accumulating childhood experiences are significant, it is believed that Walk-Ins tend to fast-forward past these experiences in order to "get on with it" and begin their work without enduring the nascent lessons of being human.

When Ruth Montgomery published her seminal book, Strangers Among Us, in 1979, she stunned the spiritual community with the assertion that not only was this previously fringe concept more common than had been imagined, but people in prominent positions of power were subjects of Walk-In experiences. In her book she names Christopher Columbus, Benjamin Franklin and Gandhi, among others, in a long line of influential Walk-Ins. She goes on to explain that not only are Walk-Ins attracted to substantial positions of power, but many are working quietly among us in all levels of society.

What's ironic is that although some religious organizations denounce Walk-Ins as having malevolent intentions on par with possession, the very same organizations tout a fundamental shift in consciousness that happens to their followers when they begin to perceive a soul within their body that is previously unfamiliar to them. For example, in Christianity this experience is named awakening, Buddhism calls it bodhi, and Hinduism refers to it as moksha.

And although these experiences are described in unique ways, what is common is that there is a profound shift in consciousness when the mind acknowledges the existence of a soul that was not perceived before. In fact, Christianity asserts that pivotal event stems directly from the act of “inviting Jesus Christ into your heart,” which could be perceived as similar to the “agreement” that is made with a Walk-In.

There is much work to be done in the field of metaphysics to help us comprehend how experiences that are common to us all can be understood and shared with one another. This is one of the main reasons why I was compelled to write and direct the feature film Walk-In (Hay House DVD, October 1, 2013). I am fascinated by how these occurrences define our relationship with ourselves, our loved ones, and ultimately the world around us. And I hope to provide a catalyst for discussion about one of the most profound challenges that affects us all: how to come to terms with having a spiritual experience in a physical body.

My personal journey of discovery into the mysteries of Subtle Energy Fields...

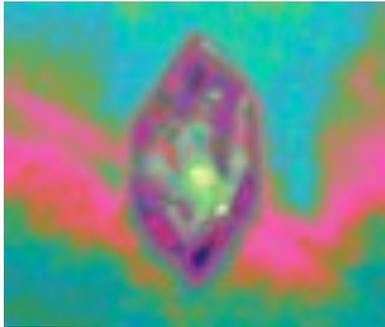

By Chris Lovelidge

My personal journey of discovery into the mysteries of Subtle Energy Fields (SEF) began in 1975 when I had a Near Death Experience (NDE); it frightened the life out of me. At that time there was no information available about these transcendental experiences. I concluded that I had developed a psychosis and my next step was the funny farm. Unknown to me at that time, Dr. Raymond Moody, a psychiatrist investigating this phenomenon, published his findings in a book entitled "Life after Life".. Fortunately for me I heard the book being reviewed on the radio; I purchased it and read it in two days. The information in the book was startling and very healing. First I discovered I was not mentally ill (a great relief); secondly I was not the only one who had had an NDE (an even greater relief). But significantly I decided I had to discover just exactly what had happened to me, how and why.

You may be wondering what the connection is between an NDE and Subtle Energies; stay with me on this one.

This is the crystal before being energized

The crystal after being energized

Here's a question: if blockages in the flow relate to disease, and where there is free flowing energy there is no disease, does it follow that removing the blockage will relieve the disease? If that is so and one can alter the field by thought alone, this suggests you can remove the blockage with your own thoughts and heal yourself. It works. I've done it.

There are over 150 different modalities of energy healing in use throughout the world today and all appear to operate in a similar manner. The healer requires loving intent to heal and be able to focus on that intent by invoking assistance either from the higher levels of consciousness or some greater power. Many healers can actually feel the blockage in the flow as either warm or cool areas on the body; a few others can actually see this field as vague colours. Apart from using hands for healing there are other modes that use various equipment or items such as crystals. Below are scans of a quartz crystal before and after healing. The changes in the center of the crystal and surrounding field can be clearly seen. Note the presence of reds and pinks in the first scan and greens and blue in the second signifying the change in density of the fields.

This is a scan showing the state of the Energy field before a healing session. Note the large area enclosed by the red Indicating congestion in the upper lungs And high cellular activity leading to a denser field.

This is a second scan of the same man after healing. Note the change in the shape and colour of the field. The Green indicates balance and absence of cellular activity.

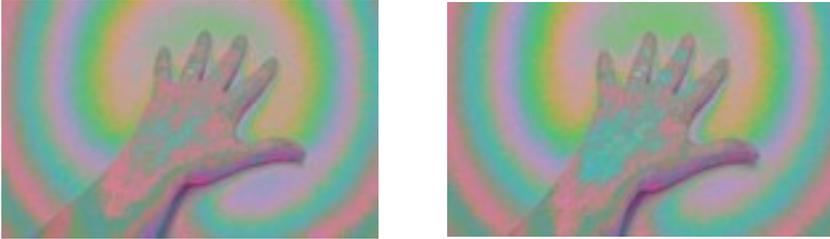

There are references to the SEF or Prana field in several ancient texts. The most well known is probably the Ayurvedic Yoga Kundalini Upanishad, written between 1400 BC and 1000 BC. The texts refer to the chakras and this is the origin of this word used to describe the rotating energy centers in the body. Below is a scan showing the shape of the chakras on one person. The shapes and sizes appear to differ from person to person depending on their physical and mental, even spiritual condition.

I was introduced into SEFs in UK by a man who had developed a very interesting system that appeared to have the ability to reveal an energy field around people. Not only around but through and not only people but animals. Amazingly, there were even indications this field was associated with all life. Even red blood cells have one.

It seems the SEF contains some quite amazing data; here are a few:

- It is in constant motion through and around the body;
- No edge or limit has been found, suggesting there isn't one, further suggesting the SEF is disseminated throughout the universe;
- Blockages or congestion in the flow or movement have been shown to relate directly to either disease, injury, past or present, and can be a pre-cursor to disease;
- The SEF can exist in cohesive form free of and independent of the body;
- The field can be altered by thought alone;
- There is no field where there is no life;
- It is speculated the SEF can or does exist outside of the space-time continuum.

Different modes of healing appear to achieve the same result. Here are scans of someone before and after receiving acupuncture healing.

Again, notice the changes in the shape and colour of the SEF, particularly the enhanced green area indicating a balanced field.

The scans can detect quite fine details of the field and its density. Below is a scan of a girl with a head cold.

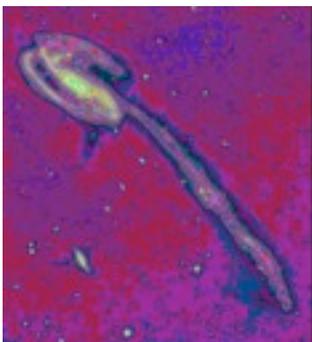

There are several areas of interest here: the throat area has an enclosed area of red indicating infection and high cellular activity where the body's immune system is highly active. An enclosed area also shows the energy is motionless. This also applies to the red areas on the sinuses on the forehead and cheeks.

So, how does energy healing work? How can intent or laying on of hands change anything?

There is now clear evidence that thought has energy or is energy, and it is this energy that has the power to manipulate the field.

One of the foremost researchers in the field of Subtle Energies is William Tiller, Ph.D., Professor Emeritus at UCLA. His seminal work has brought the SEF into mainstream science or at least the open minded form of science. He has published many papers on the subject which he has named “Psychoenergetic Science”. He quotes “We humans are much more than we think we are; Psychoenergetic Science continues to expand the proof of it”.

There have been many experiments on the subject of thought having energy including one undertaken by Prof Tiller where he was able to alter the pH balance of water up or down simply by thought or intent. The experiment has been repeated many times and is therefore considered empirical.

A second, more famous experiment was done by Masaru Emoto's using the formation of ice crystals. He discovered that by projecting positive thoughts at water as it was crystallizing the crystals formed beautiful cohesive patterns. If negative thoughts we project the crystals were chaotic. This experiment also has the advantage of being repeatable.

Another scientist involved in subtle energy fields is Prof. Rupert Sheldrake but he has named them Morphic Fields and the physical changes relating to these fields Morphogenesis. He suggests that animals, particularly dogs, have an innate ability to know not only when an owner is leaving work to come home but when the owner decides to come home. This is telepathy in animals and he suggest telepathy in humans is normal rather than paranormal. For information to be transmitted from one person (or dog) to another requires energy, it must be thought energy. What I find so interesting is how the dog appears to be “tuned in” to its owner. The dog does not get excited when anyone else leaves work to come home.

Now that the existence of the SEF has been revealed and established scientifically we now have something tangible to experiment with. One of the dilemmas we now encounter is the nature of the SEF. It seems it is neither thermal, atomic nor electromagnetic. The nature can only be determined by further experiment.

From what we know of the field it is an energy form, and to quote Einstein “energy cannot be created or destroyed, it can only be changed from one to another form”. It seems then the SEF must be eternal. The indication that the field can exist in cohesive form was taken from a scan of a cadaver in a morgue. The scan revealed an energy field hovering above a body of a man who had died in a road accident very suddenly about 18 hours previously. Did this field come from that body? It cannot be proven but I believe it did.

Ghosts appear to be subtle energy in human or other form. I say that because of personal experience. I came face to face with a ghost some time ago. It was on board a cargo ship and I was laying on my bunk reading one afternoon. I looked up and saw an East Indian man looking at me about 5ft away. He was transparent. Now there is a method to determine if a ghost is real or hallucination, if you have the presence of mind. I did. I looked at the ghost and crossed my eyes. The reason for that is by crossing the eyes anything you look at will become double. Anything being imposed on the visual cortex from another part of the brain (as in hallucination) and does not pass through the eyes and optic nerve will not look double. Yes, my ghost looked double and no I was not scared, after all it was only energy.

With the data amassed on the SEF we can now make some hypothesis. It is clear the SEF is a mysterious and ineffable form of energy. If this energy were conscious, aware and sentient it could explain many strange phenomena. Perhaps it could incorporate our own thoughts, memories, likes and dislikes, all we are. If this is so it would explain ghosts, telepathy, out of body experiences and yes, the Near Death Experience.

THE BLESSING OF SUBTLE ENERGY: TOWARD A SIMPLE EXPLANATION

The night is hot and dark. Although you cannot see the sky through the roof, you can sense the stars stretching down, encouraging your dreams. At midnight, the Beyond speaks, telling you that from this point on, your life will be different. You will be different. What matters will change—and you will be able to change matter.

WHAT IF THE THIS WERE TO HAPPEN TO YOU?

This story is true for Makendra Kuma Trivedi, known as Trivedi or Guruji. Since the evening described, which occurred in India in 1995, Trivedi has demonstrated an ability to shift physical reality thousands of times, in areas ranging from agriculture to microbiology. What does he do? He administers “blessings,” none longer than a few minutes and never twice for any particular concern. University and government studies affirm his effectiveness.

BY CYN DI DALE

MIRACLE MAKERS

In one study, Trivedi modified the behavior of dozens of crop species, increasing seed germination and survival rates among blessed plants to 99.5 percent, compared to 60-65 percent in control crops. ¹ In another University-based study on chickpeas, the plot yields increased more than 350 percent over control yields. ² Triveda hasn't only shifted plants. He has also substantially altered other organic and inorganic materials and DNA. ³

As magical as his abilities, Trivedi is one of innumerable people who have performed mini-miracles. There are Jesus Christ, Buddha, and the prophets, gurus, and sages of nearly every religion. There are healers including J.R. Newton, M.D., whom healed hundreds through laying-on of hands in the 19th Century

Consider Dr. Yan Xin, who graduated from medical school in China in 1977 and began healing people by projecting chi energy. ⁵John of God a contemporary healer in Brazil, has healed thousands of individuals through psychic surgery. His fans include spiritual leader Wayne Dwyer, who credits John of God with freeing him from leukemia. ⁶ And Dr. Ibrahim Kharim, Egyptian architect and scientist, has used symbols and color to grow apples with an incredibly long shelf life, heal critical illnesses, and even improve air quality on airplanes. ⁷

These are all examples of applied subtle energy, which I define as an immeasurable force (or set of forces) that responds to consciousness.

AS AN ENERGY MEDICINE SPECIALIST AND INTUITIVE, I WORK WITH SUBTLE ENERGY EVERY DAY. Even in my

daily life, I rely on subtle energy to negotiate the universe for change and to receive spiritual guidance. Most likely, you do, too.

We might not all grow giant grass in our lawn and or heal an injury with a glance; nonetheless, we are all composed of—and interconnected through—subtle energies. What might we be able to accomplish if we could better harness its force, as immeasurable and invisible this energy might be?

WHAT EXACTLY IS SUBTLE ENERGY?

There are a variety of theories, which incorporate terms like zero point energy, scalar waves, torsion fields, time-reversed waves, non-Hertzian waves, and longitudinal waves. Sometimes these terms are exchanged for the label “subtle energy.” While science has only recently turned pen and paper to the study of this energy, its existence is nothing new. For thousands of years, it has been called chi in China, ki in Japan; prana amongst Hindu and Tibetan cultures; mana in Polynesia; and baraka in North Africa. While traditionally ascribed to mystical events including psychic interactions, miraculous healing, levitation of objects, and mind power, our ancestors saw no discrepancy in assuming the co-existence of this magical property and the solidity of the perceptible world. They toiled in the soil to plant their crops then prayed them into being. They set broken bones and then used their subtle energy gifts to meld them together.

In approaching the topic scientifically, it's important to remember that subtle energy is first and foremost, energy. Simplistically, energy is simply information that moves. As explained by Paul Pearsall, M.D., in his book The Heart's Code,⁸ science has determined that information and energy are the same. Everything that exists has energy, which is full of information. Even the mind or consciousness is a manifestation of information-containing energy.⁹

decades ago, matter actually consists of waves, which have movement. Albert Einstein then proved that even photons, which have no weight, are still energy and therefore vibrate; in fact, their momentum is entirely dependent on frequency. We've also discovered that at the most minute level, that of quantum units, we find continual frenetic activity.¹⁰ Hence energy is information in constant movement.

BUT SUBTLE ENERGY VERSUS PHYSICAL ENERGY HAS A UNIQUE PROPERTY. IT IS TIED INTO WHAT WE CALL “VIRTUAL REALITY.”

On the atomic level, more than 99 percent of the mass of the visible universe is made of protons and neutrons. The heaviest ingredients of these atomic particles are quantum units, mainly quarks and gluons. However, these atomic particles are far heavier than the weight of their perceivable sub-atomic particles. These and other observations have led scientists to suggest that much of the universe is made of “virtual particles,” particles that exist for only a short amount of time. They add weight and then disappear again.

Virtual particles are actually fluctuations of vacuum energy. In other words, they come from a vacuum, which has led scientists to wonder if matter is really made of vacuum fluctuations.¹¹

SIMPLISTICALLY, ENERGY IS SIMPLY INFORMATION THAT MOVES.

EVERYTHING THAT EXISTS HAS ENERGY, WHICH IS FULL OF INFORMATION.
EVEN THE MIND OR CONSCIOUSNESS IS A MANIFESTATION OF
INFORMATION -
CONTAINING ENERGY.

In my high school science classes, I was taught that a vacuum, the lowest ground state of all fields in space, is empty. Not so. Even the seemingly empty areas of space between galaxies contain matter, or energy that can potentially become matter. This theory, decades old, was recently confirmed by a 2011 experiment at Chalmers University in Gothenburg, Sweden, in which scientists turned “virtual” light particles, which flicker in and out of existence in a vacuum, into measurable, material particles.

How are vacuum-based virtual particles transformed into material particles? Enter stage left, “the Higgs field,” a field that creates mass out of the quantum vacuum in the form of virtual Higgs bosons.¹³ Yet other scientists emphasize “zero point energy,” the energy that’s left when you remove all other energy from a quantum system.¹⁴ Zero point energy is one term for the particles that can appear materially and then fall back into the ocean of unmanifested potential.¹⁵

Is it possible that we have more “say” about where these particles are going to appear than we think? That our consciousness determines, at least in part, what will disappear, and what will appear?

Defining consciousness is a big job; it is a concept inky and muddled, biochemical and vast. I propose we borrow an idea from the keen minds of Allan Combs and Ken Wilber, pioneers of Integral thought, to emphasize the fact that consciousness, which is imbedded in the universe, is linked to perspective, which is subjective.¹⁶ Basically our subjective perspective helps “vote” what should appear or not out of the vacuum or zero point energy.

There are thousands of studies that document the effects of consciousness on physical reality. For example, the Princeton Pear Lab has accumulated more than 30 years of research on this topic, showing that everything in the universe is connected; not only that, but the mind acts upon, and can alter, objects, people, and events, despite the separation of time and space.¹⁷

One particularly noteworthy study, which included the efforts of Lynne McTaggart and Gary Schwartz among others, charged delegates at a London conference to send intention to one of two geranium leaves at the University of Arizona, Tucson. The leaf that received the intention literally started to “glow;” in other words, its biophoton emissions increased. The other one was unchanged.¹⁸

How does this type of “thought transference” occur—and so instantaneously, seemingly breaking the barriers of space-time? Fifty years ago, Professor Nikolai Kozyrev, a respected Russian astrophysicist, began answering this question, discovering a new force in physics, which he called the “density of time.” This force involved a twisting in space he called “torsion.”

THE GOD PARTICLE

The Higgs boson, also known as the “God Particle”, is a particle. It gets its mass like all other particles: by interacting with (“swimming in”) the Higgs field... It can be thought of as a dense spot in the Higgs field, which can travel like any other particle. Like a drop of water in water vapor.

The Higgs particle is considered to be a carrier of a force -- hum! Higgs bosons obey the conservation of energy law, which states that no energy can be created or destroyed, but instead it is transferred. - Wikipedia

Apparently anything with mass can create its own torsion field or wave. When a particle spin suddenly changes direction, the particle produces torsion waves, a form of particle radiation. Since all elementary particles have mass and spin, they can generate their own torsion field. The direction of the twist—to the right or the left, predicts if entropy (defined as “lack of order” but also “information”) is increased or decreased at the point of origin, with the opposite occurring at a point elsewhere. Thus is balanced assured within the entirety of a system. ¹⁹ Hence we could say that when information “disappears” from one place it can also “appear” elsewhere.²⁰

A torsion field can create patterns with their spins, encoding the pattern with information. Subtle energy work, such as accomplished through the application of ESP, hands-on healing, prayer, focus, or energy medicine techniques, is often accompanied by the use of shapes to produce change, as noted in our earlier mention of Dr. Ibrahim Kharim’s work. While particle shifts can create torsion fields that result in patterns, which in turn, act upon the vacuum, the opposite can also be true. Patterns—or even colors and sounds—can invoke shifts that result in alterations of reality.

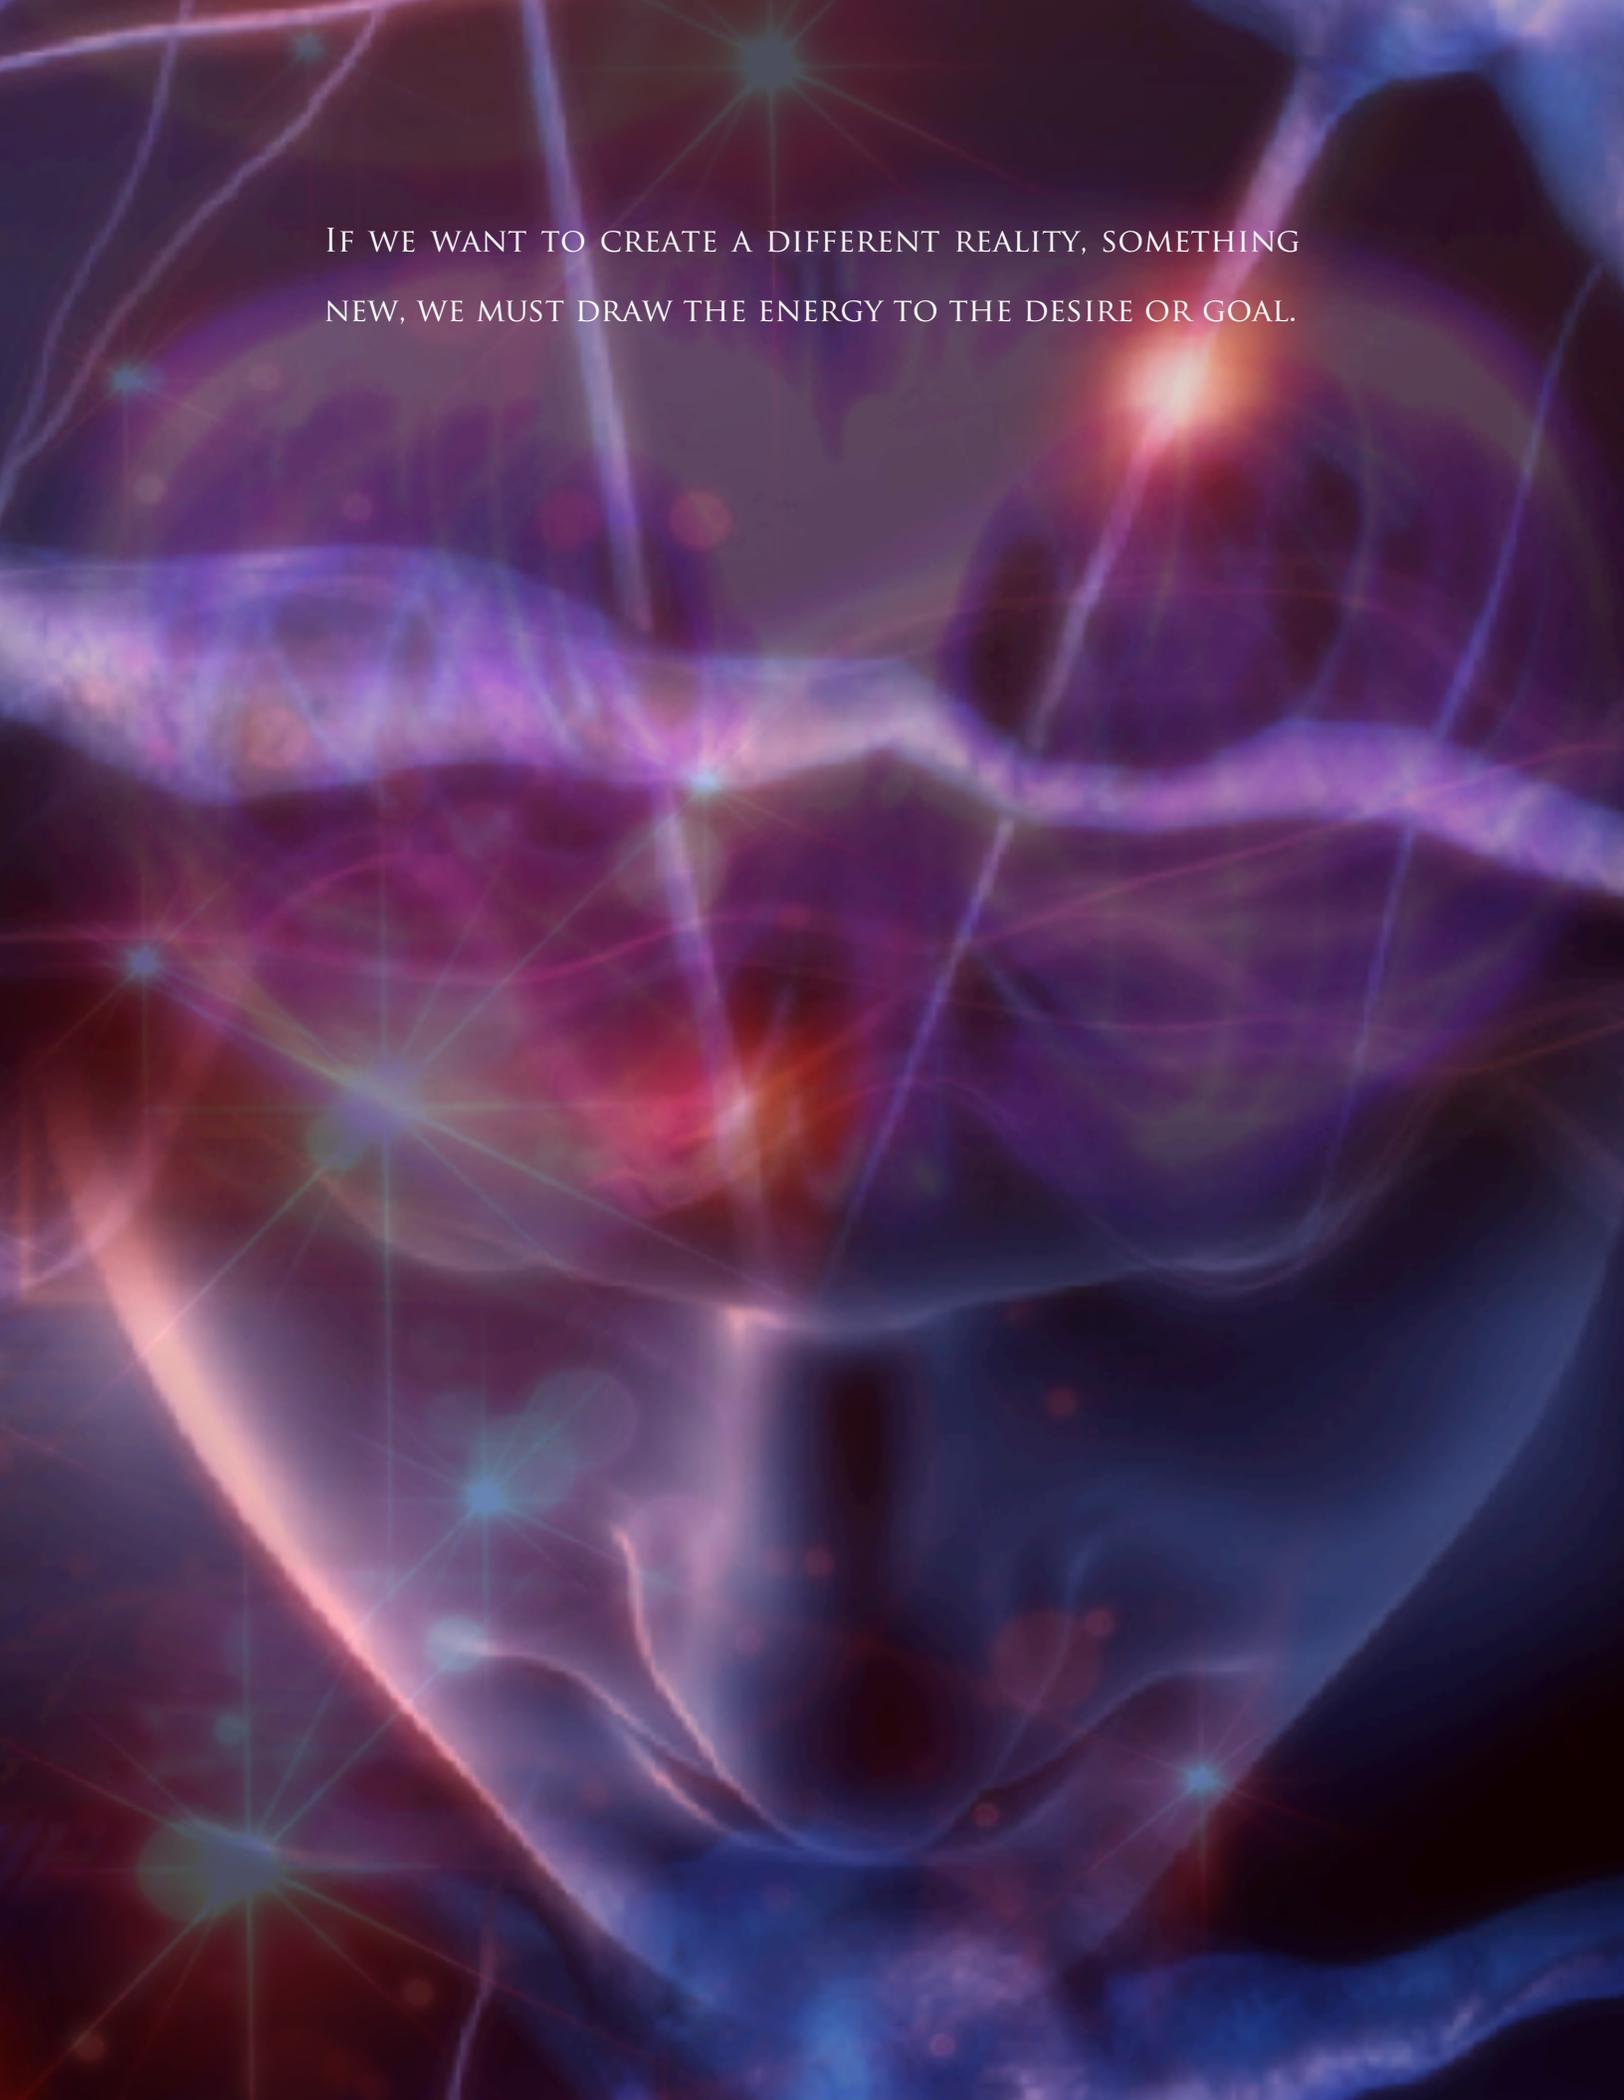

Several physicists are now bending their minds to this idea, long-held by ancient mystics. As pointed out in an article by

Meinard Kuhlmann in Scientific American, physicists have typically believed that particles and force fields underlie reality; instead, these energies might actually themselves respond to bundles of properties, such as color and shape. ²¹

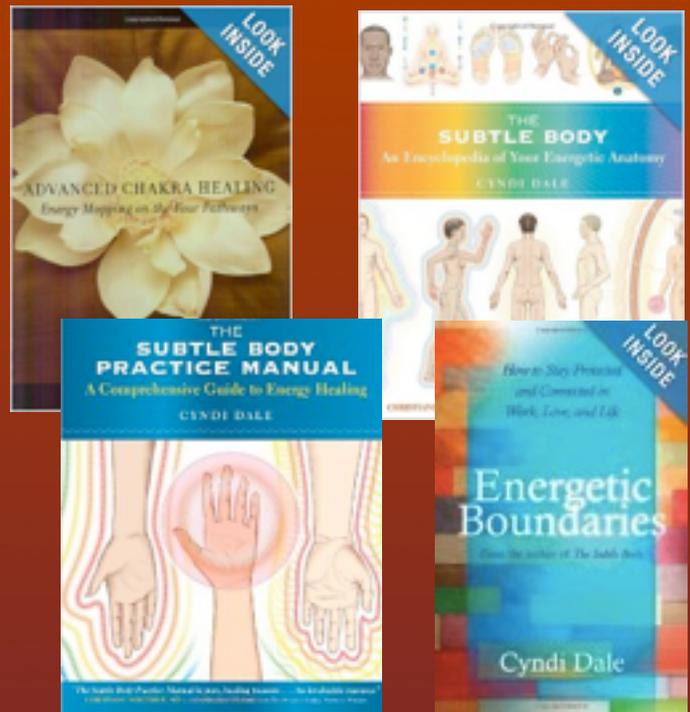

Might it really take only one persistent thought or feeling—or color or shape, to spin a new reality—one that might persist on its own? The evidence is amassing. ²² If so, how can the average person use this knowledge to make a difference? I had a dream that provided me a clue.

In the dream, I was dropped into the past, returned to a restaurant I worked at years ago. My money (and shoes) remained behind. A waitress named Nancy asked the restaurant owners to employ me; they said yes. Then Nancy disappeared and the owners forgot about me.

What is my “take away?” Subtle energy follows organized energy. The owners were focused on Nancy; with her out of the quotient, I meant nothing. If we want to create a different reality, something new, we must draw the energy to the desire or goal, not project it elsewhere. We must organize ourselves into the desired reality and virtual particles, and frequencies or forces that enable reality, will follow suit. If indeed, form follows consciousness, perhaps we can bless a new world into being.

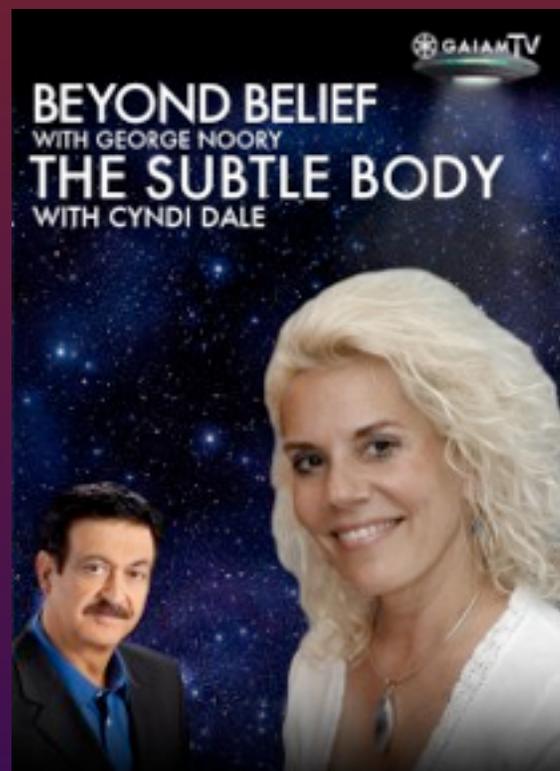

IF WE WANT TO CREATE A DIFFERENT REALITY, SOMETHING NEW, WE MUST DRAW THE ENERGY TO THE DESIRE OR GOAL.

TELEPATHY

By Rupert Sheldrake, Ph.D.

Sir Laurens van der Post, the anthropologist and explorer, found that bushmen were in telepathic contact over many miles. They themselves compared their method of communication to the white man's telegraph or "wire". In his book The Lost World of the Kalahari, van der Post describes a hunting trip with a group of bushmen. As they were heading back in Land-Rovers laden with eland meat, he asked how the people back at the camp would react when they learned of their success. One of his companions replied, "They already know. They know by wire.... We bushmen have a wire here" - he tapped his chest - "that brings us news." Sure enough, when they approached the camp, the people were singing the eland song and preparing to give the hunters the greatest of welcomes.

By contrast, educated people in the West are usually brought up to believe that telepathy does not exist. Like other so-called psychic phenomena, it is dismissed as an illusion.

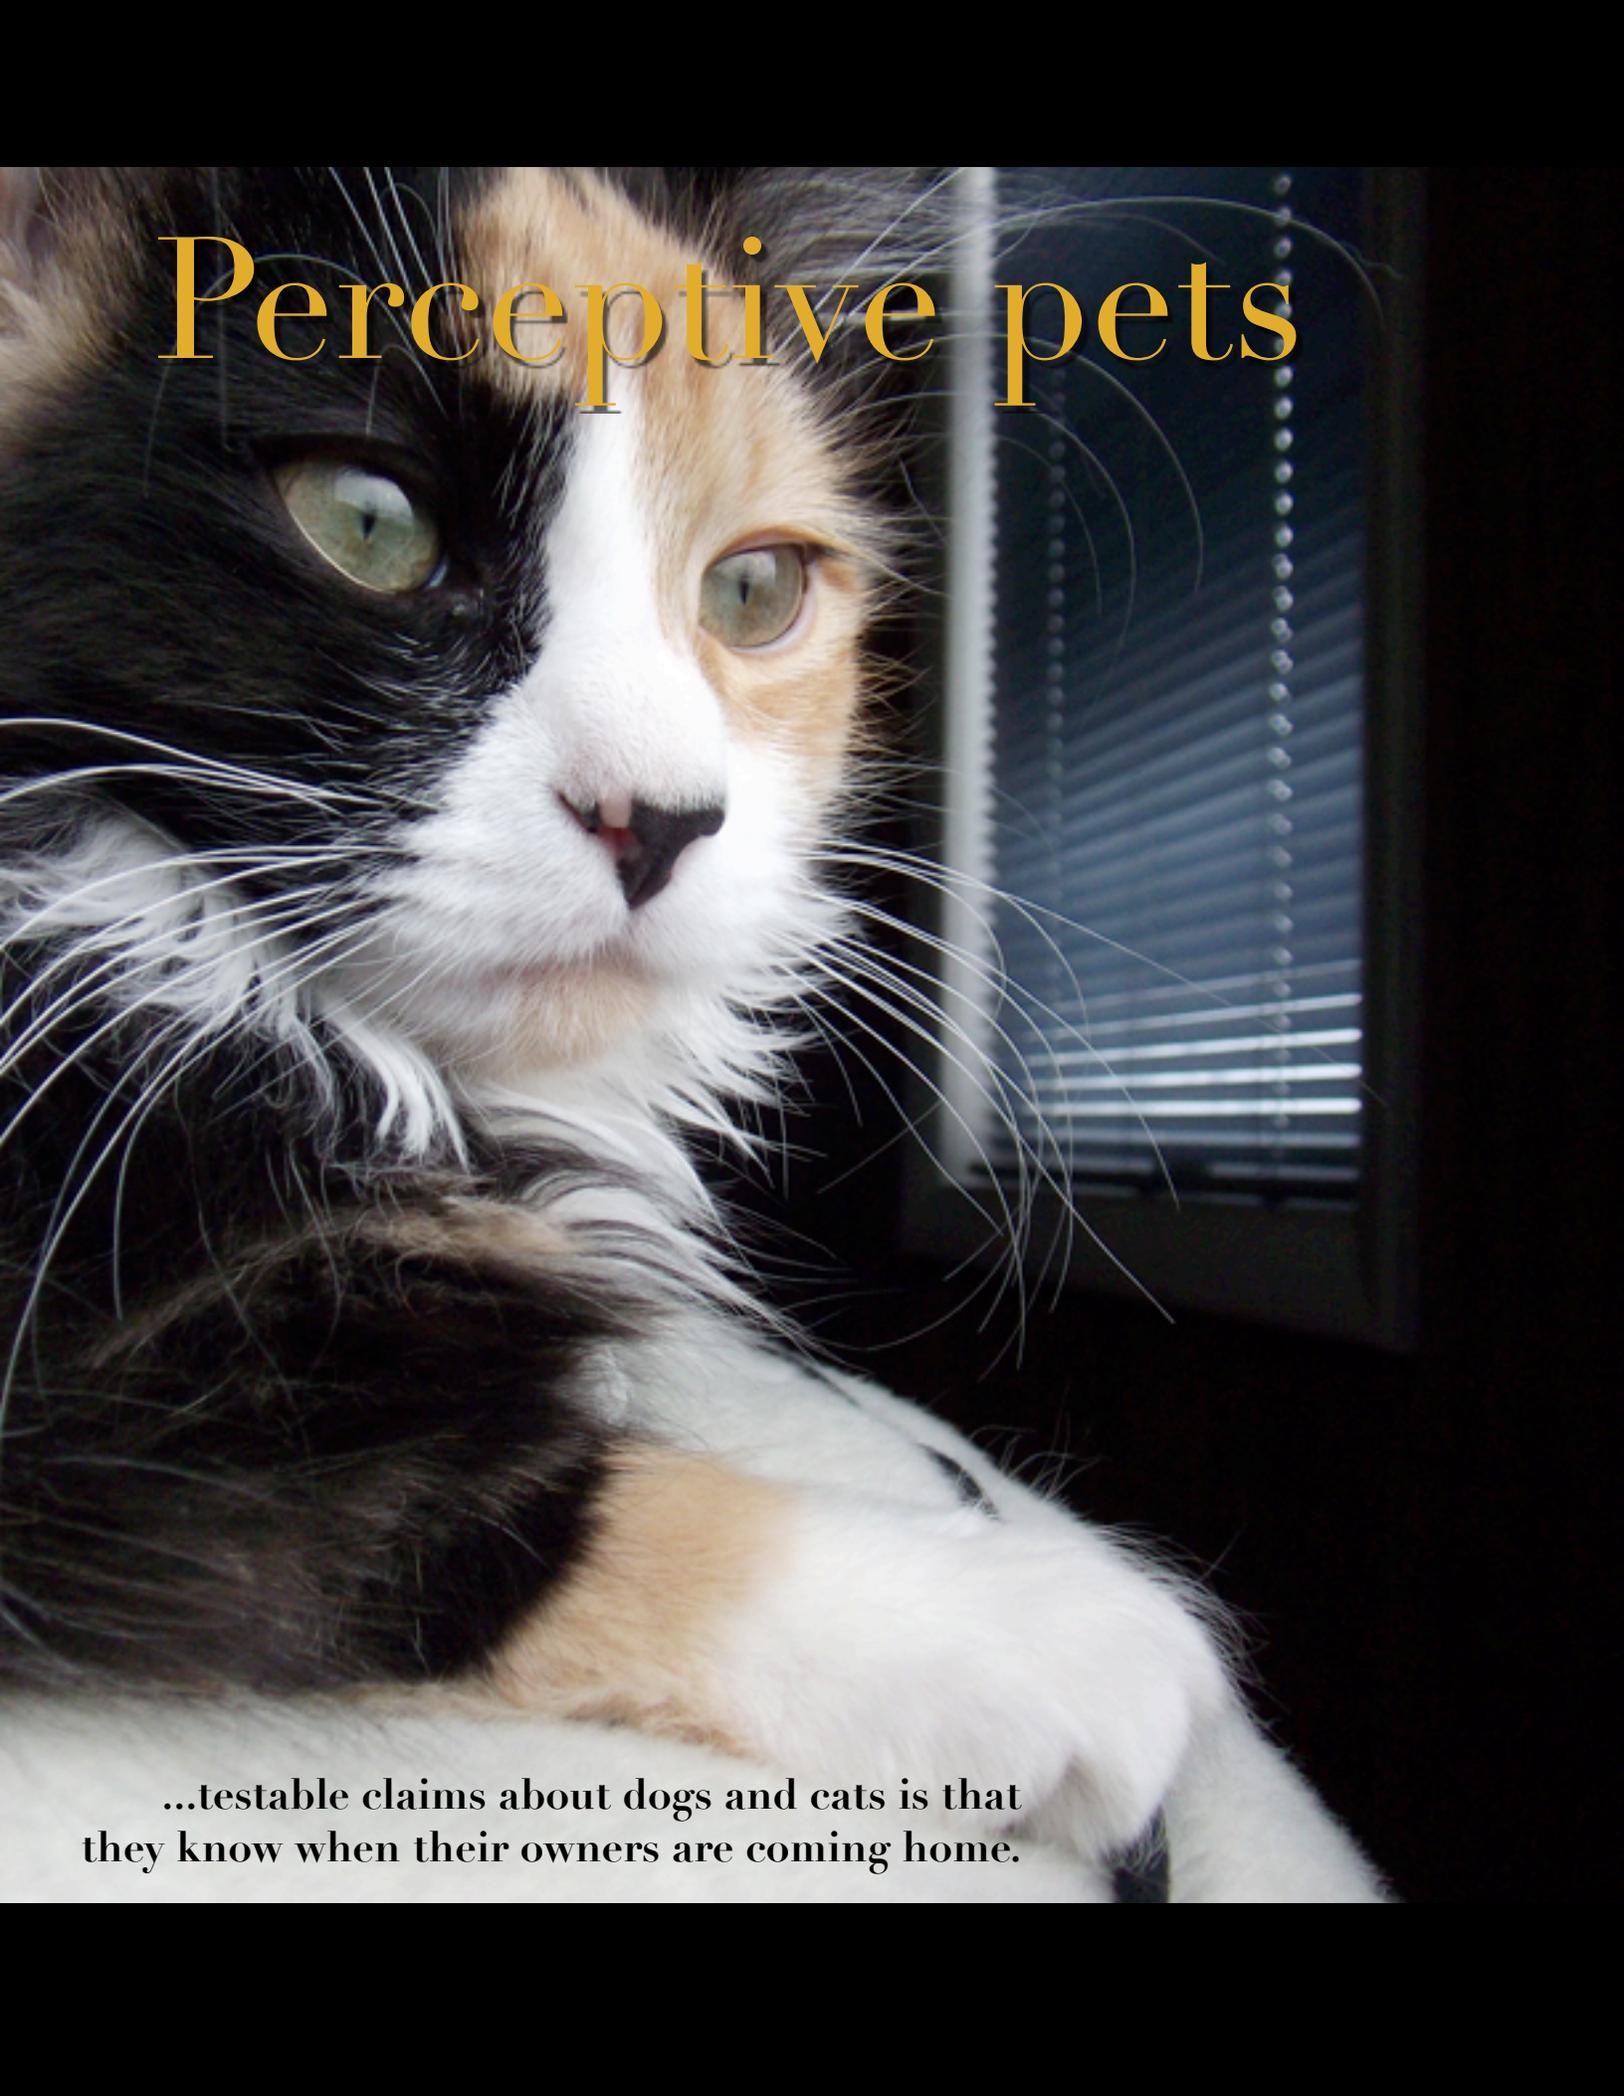

Nevertheless, most people have had personal experiences that seem telepathic, most frequently in connection with telephones. For example, Janet Ward, of Budleigh Salterton, England, told me, "For a long time, I have had a feeling of telepathy with my two daughters whom I am very close to. I start thinking about them just before the phone rings. It happens too with friends. I'm always saying 'I was just thinking about you' when I answer the phone to them."

Jaytee's reactions were not a matter of routine, but occurred whenever Pam came home at randomly selected times signalled through a telephone pager. Jaytee behaved in the same way when he was tested repeatedly by sceptics anxious to debunk his abilities.

Dismissed as Illusion

'I was just thinking about you'
when I answer the phone to them."

Perceptive pets

...testable claims about dogs and cats is that they know when their owners are coming home.

Telepathy seems even more common with dogs and cats than with people. For example, many cat owners have found that their animals seem to sense when they are planning to take them to the vet, even before they have got out the carrying basket or given any apparent clues as to their intention. They disappear.

In the course of several years' research with pets, I heard so many of these stories that I made a survey of all the vets in north London to find out what they had noticed. All but one said people often cancelled appointments because they could not find their cat. The remaining clinic had given up an appointment system for cats because there were so many cancellations; people just had to turn up with their animal.

Some people say their dogs know when they are going to be taken for a walk, even at unusual times, and even when they are in a different room, out of sight and hearing. The dogs detect their owners' intentions, and bound into the room in eager anticipation.

One of the commonest and most testable claims about dogs and cats is that they know when their owners are coming home. In some cases they seem to anticipate their owners' arrivals by ten minutes or more, even at non-routine times, and even when people travel in unfamiliar vehicles.

The dog I investigated in most detail was a terrier called Jaytee, who belongs to Pam Smart, in Ramsbottom, Greater Manchester. Pam's family noticed that he seemed to anticipate her returns by going to wait at the window up to 45 minutes before she came home. He started waiting around the time she set off.

In more than 100 trials, we videotaped the area by the window where Jaytee waited during Pam's absences, providing a continuous, time-coded record of his behaviour. She went at least five miles away. To find out if Jaytee was simply reacting to the sound of her car, she returned by train or by taxi. He still knew when she was coming.

The evidence shows that Jaytee was reacting to Pam's intention to come home even when she was miles away. We have since replicated this work with other dogs. Telepathy seems the only hypothesis that can account for the facts. (For more details, see my book Dogs that Know When their Owners Are Coming Home, And Other Unexplained Powers of Animals.)

If domestic animals are telepathic with their human owners, then it seems likely that animals are telepathic with each other in the wild, for example within packs of wolves. Telepathy may have evolved as a means of communication that enables members of animal groups to keep in touch at a distance.

Morphic Fields

My own hypothesis about telepathy is that it depends on fields that links together members of social groups, which I call a morphic fields. Flocks of birds and schools of fish are held together by such fields, which is why they are able to move in such a coordinated way without the animals bumping into each other. When members of social groups are separated from each other – for example when adult wolves go out hunting to find food for their cubs, left behind in the den – the group field is not broken but stretches, continuing to link the separated members of the group. Influences can travel through this field, which is the basis of telepathic communication.

Morphic fields are organizing fields that give structure and pattern to systems under their influence. The word “morphic” comes from the Greek word “morphe” meaning form. They are not the same as electromagnetic or gravitational fields, but like these other fields are spread out in space and continue through time. I discuss these fields in more detail in my book MorphicResonance. In some ways morphic fields are similar to quantum fields, and telepathy resembles quantum entanglement, whereby particles that have been part of the same system remain connected at a distance. Telepathy occurs most strongly between bonded members of social groups, and enables them to pick up each other’s intentions and needs.

Morphic fields are organizing fields that give structure and pattern to systems under their influence.

In modern human societies we now have telephones, but telepathy has not gone away. Someone's intention to make a call often seems to be picked up telepathically before the call itself.

But is apparent telephone telepathy really telepathic? Could there be a more mundane explanation? People may think of others from time to time for no particular reason, and if someone they are thinking of then calls, this may be a matter of chance. People may simply forget all the times they think of someone who does not ring.

This is a reasonable possibility, but there is no evidence for it. The only way to resolve the question scientifically is by experiment.

I have developed a simple procedure in which subjects receive a call from one of four different callers at a prearranged time. The subjects nominate the callers themselves, usually close friends or family members. They do not know who will be calling in any given test, because the caller is picked at random by the experimenter by the throw of a die. Subjects have to guess who the caller is before picking up the receiver. By chance they would be right about one time in four, or 25 per cent of the time. In many of these trials, the participants are videotaped continuously to make sure that they do not receive any other telephone calls or emails that could give them any clues.

My colleagues and I have so far conducted more than 1000 trials. The average success rate is 42 per cent, very significantly above the chance level of 25 per cent, with statistical odds against chance of trillions to one.

We have also carried out a series of trials in which two of the four callers were familiar, and the other two were strangers, whose names the participants knew, but whom they had not met. With familiar callers, the success rate was more than 50 per cent, highly significant statistically. With strangers it was near the chance level, in agreement with the observation that telepathy typically takes place between people who share emotional or social bonds.

In addition, we have found that these effects do not fall off with distance. In some of our tests the callers were in Australia or New Zealand, but the subjects in Britain identified them just as well as callers nearby, even though they were on the other side of the Earth.

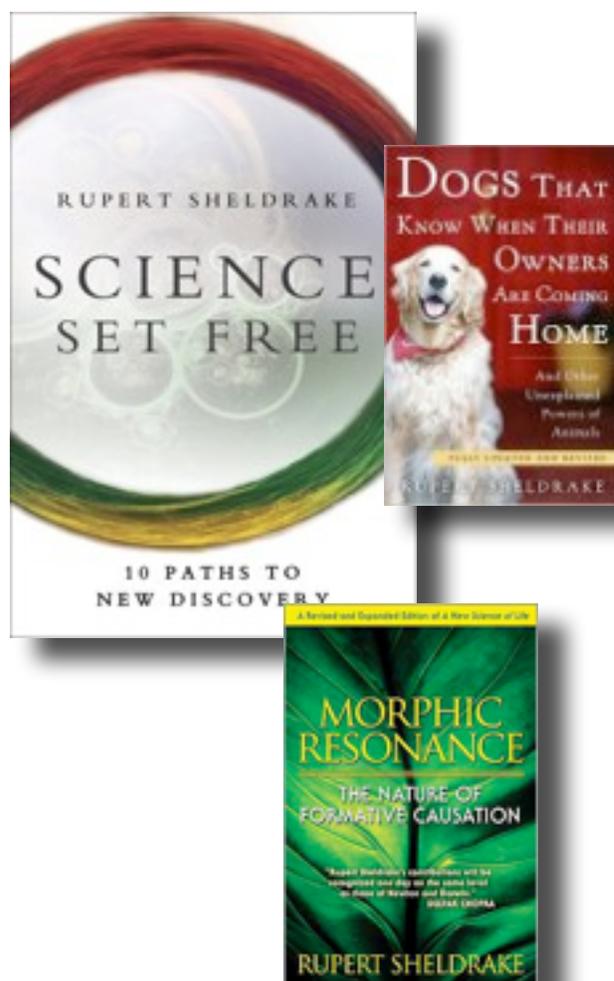

Telephone Telepathy

In some of their laboratory research on telepathy, parapsychologists have used senders and receivers who are complete strangers, creating poor conditions for success. Nevertheless, many experiments have shown positive, statistically significant effects, and when taken together, they provide good evidence for the reality of telepathy. With participants who are bonded to each other the results are generally even more impressive.

Telepathy continues to evolve. One of its latest manifestations is the telepathic email or text message. People think of someone who shortly afterwards sends them an email or a text. We have done more than 700 tests on email telepathy, following a similar design to the telephone tests, with a success rate of 43 per cent, highly significant statistically. Similar experiments with text messages have also given similarly positive results. Telephone telepathy tests can now be done with cell phones through my website, and readers are welcome to try for themselves (www.sheldrake.org).

We do not yet fully understand telepathy; but it is unscientific to dismiss it or pretend it doesn't exist. Only by exploring it can we find out more. We still have much to learn about the nature of minds, and telepathy offers vital clues. It implies that we are more interconnected than we usually assume.

IS THERE A BLUEPRINT FOR THE UNIVERSE?

The Book of Genesis clearly depicts the 6 days of Creation. But when was it? How long was it? Was it 6 days? And what does science say about it?

Every word of the Genesis account describes the origins of the universe and life, and every discovery and observation by science leads us to understand how the universe came to be, often in contradiction to Genesis – they can't both be right, or can they?.

The book, The Genesis One Code, presents a 'Scale of Origin' – a discovery of monumental proportions – undeniably connecting the dots and filling in the gray areas between the mismatched timelines of science and the Bible.

TWO SUPER MICROSCOPES REVEAL CURES FOR HUMANITY

DR. RIFE AND HIS RIFE MICROSCOPE

By Steven A. Ross, Ph.D.
President World Research Foundation

...TWO SUPER MICROSCOPES, SHOW CONVINCINGLY THAT HEALTH, DIS-EASE OR ILLNESS IS A RESULT OF THE ENERGETIC FIELDS THAT SURROUND AND INTERTWINE OUR BODY...

Following the hermetic formula; As above so below, As below so above, we know that these same forces, seen through the microscopes hold the planets, galaxies and all forms together.

Everything is surrounded and constituted with energy. We live, move and maintain our life due to energy fields. How do we proceed in the future? We need to understand the energy fields that create and sustain our existence.

There are numerous scientists, medical specialists and researchers that have been aware and written profound books and papers regarding the forgoing. The work of Dr. George Crile, Dr. Harold Saxton Burr, Dr. Bjorn Nordenstrom, Royal R. Rife, Georges Lakhovsky and so many other brilliant minds should be reviewed. For more information on the research of Crile, Burr, Nordenstrom, Rife, Lakhovsky and several others I would refer you to my book, "And Nothing Happened...But You Can Make It Happen."

Also contact the World Research Foundation at www.wrf.org for additional information.

The Rife Universal Microscope built in 1932 and the Nemescope built in 1954, two super microscopes, show convincingly that health, disease or illness is a result of the energetic fields that surround and intertwine our body. These fields encompasses the smallest aspects of the particles that hold matter together to the fields that hold our total existence together.

Dr. Bjorn Nordenstrom, former Chairman of the Nobel Assembly in Sweden, proved convincingly that changes in electrical potential at specific points in the body lead to tumor growth and that the use of exact electrical fields can cause the body to 'turn-on' defense mechanisms to shrink and eliminate tumors. As tumors grew there was a corresponding change in the electrical potential in and surrounding the tumor. Discover Magazine stated in its April 1986 issue, that Dr. Nordenstrom had made the biomedical discovery of the century regarding the body's electrical make-up.

I had the opportunity to spend two weeks with Dr. Nordenstrom when our organization flew him to speak at our 1986 world congress in Los Angeles. Dr. Nordenstrom presented his theories and experimental results of shrinking breast and chest cancer tumors using electricity with virtually no side effects. Dr. Nordenstrom presented the World Research Foundation with a signed copy of his medical book and we had a small ceremony as we placed the book within our library. Sitting next to Nordenstrom's book was another little book with tape holding its bindings together. Dr. Nordenstrom grabbed this little book that was titled, 'The Use of Electricity as a Therapeutic Agent'. Within this book, a medical doctor shrank a man's chest cancer tumor using electricity. The book was published in 1877. This is approximately 100 years before Dr. Nordenstrom's book.

At this point I would like to substitute the word vibrations in the place of electricity. Vibrations incorporating the aspects of color, light, sound and all frequencies in the electromagnetic spectrum.

PYTHAGORAS USED COLOR AND SOUND VIBRATIONS FOR HEALING OF BODY, MIND AND SPIRIT AROUND 500 BC. SO THE USE OF VIBRATIONS IN NOT NEW.

...PROVED CONVINCINGLY THAT CHANGES IN ELECTRICAL POTENTIAL AT SPECIFIC POINTS IN THE BODY LEAD TO TUMOR GROWTH AND THAT THE USE OF EXACT ELECTRICAL FIELDS CAN CAUSE THE BODY TO 'TURN-ON' DEFENSE MECHANISMS TO SHRINK AND ELIMINATE TUMORS.

Virus Discovered by Laboratory Technician In San Diego May Solve Cancer Problem

A San Diego laboratory technician's 15-year-old discovery of a cancer virus, coupled with recent published studies by two New York doctors and research through the Archibald Cancer Research fund at McGill University in Montreal, Canada, may point to the solutions of man's long puzzle over cancer, Dr. James B. Couch, San Diego practitioner reported recently.

Credited with the isolation of a cancer virus that travels through the blood stream is given to Dr. Royal R. Rife, 62, who revealed the virus with the use of a microscope for which he claimed 25,000 areas magnification.

Couch, who has been in San Diego for 18 years, made his statements after returning from a class reunion at the University of Toronto. While there, and having heard of the claim of a cancer virus discovery by the New York doctors, Dr. Couch visited Dr. O. Cameron Gruner of McGill University who made many trips to San Diego 15 years ago to study the work of Dr. Rife along this line. Since Dr. Rife's discovery, opposition to the virus theory has develop-wanted to check on the present status of the theory with Gruner.

The virus theory, Dr. Gruner stated, has been confirmed through his work here many years ago with Dr. Rife plus additional research at McGill. He said, these studies showed that tumorous cancer growths could be produced by Rife's virus.

When questioned recently, Rife elaborated upon this by revealing how he had, through the use of his virus, reproduced a fungoid organism the same as one brought here by Gruner when he came to San Diego to study the work. He was able to create the fungoid organism and to distill the virus back again. "All in all," Rife said, "he was able to complete the cycle 104 times and was able to successfully produce cancer in hundreds of animals with the virus."

Further impetus is being given the virus theory of cancer by Dr. J. E. Hett of Windsor, Canada, who has developed a cancer serum from a virus with which he is having success in combating the disease.

This theory, Dr. Couch stated, may also explain why surgican readily determine the changes in the types of blood cells therein.

In a recent communication from Dr. Gruner, he states that he has made over 4000 blood examinations of samples sent to him from all parts of the world, with a correct diagnosis of 85 percent of them. And whose findings were recently confirmed by an independent Ph.D. (Biologist) in Union City, Pa., who, by using Dr. Gruner's method, obtained 80 percent agreement therewith; using patients in that city whose blood was being tested by Dr. Gruner, without him knowing there was a control observer.

Dr. Maurice H. Kowan of Los Angeles, stated recently, "Hett's work is so startling and revolutionary that he visited his clinic in February of this year and to his amazement, interviewed 72 patients who had clinically recovered from Cancer, some as long as 14 years ago. A second visit to the clinic in June again verified the original findings. About 75 percent of the cases under treatment in February were clinically well in June.

In the opinion of Dr. Hett,

What is new and profound are the images that have been seen through the two super-microscopes.

“Under the unique aspects of the Rife Microscope “disease organisms such as those of tuberculosis, cancer, sarcoma, streptococcus, typhoid, leprosy, and others may be observed to succumb when exposed to certain lethal frequencies [energy] coordinated with the particular frequencies peculiar to each individual organism.” “By means of the monochromatic beam of illumination on the Rife Universal Microscope, invariable the same organisms refract the same colors when stained regardless of the medium. The virus of the Bacillus typhosus is always a turquoise blue, Bacillus coli always mahogany colored, the filter –passing form of tuberculosis always an emerald green, the virus of cancer always a purplish red, and so on.”¹

Royal R. Rife and his research team were able to establish the MOR (mortal oscillatory rate) to devitalize and kill microbes, bacteria and viruses responsible for approximately 60 diseases and illnesses. The light-source Rife Universal Microscope obtained magnification of 60,000 diameters. Specimens could be watched live for unlimited amounts of time. The Rife research also discovered that they could change germs into other pathogenic organisms. Scientifically this is known as pleomorphism. Through the use of various frequencies microorganisms could be changed from one form to another. Through the unique properties of the Rife microscope and its counter rotating risley prisms, light was heterodyned to illuminate the life frequency of all micro-organisms. Once the researchers illuminated an organism in its true natural frequency, using the same frequency rate, they could destroy the virus, bacteria, germ or whatever instantly. For those of you involved in microscopy the use of a light source microscope obtaining 60,000 diameters is unheard of and that it existed in 1932 would appear impossible. It did exist and the research team consisted of, Dr. E.C. Rosenow, Mayo Clinic, Dr. Arthur Kendall, Northwestern University, Dr. Rufus von Klein Smid, President of University of Southern California, Dr. Karly Meyer, University of California, Dr. Lewellys Barker, Johns Hopkins, Dr. Alvin Ford, President of the American Association of Pathologists, and several other medical doctors.

For the purposes of this article my point is that this microscope illuminated vibrations that showed the life force of organisms.

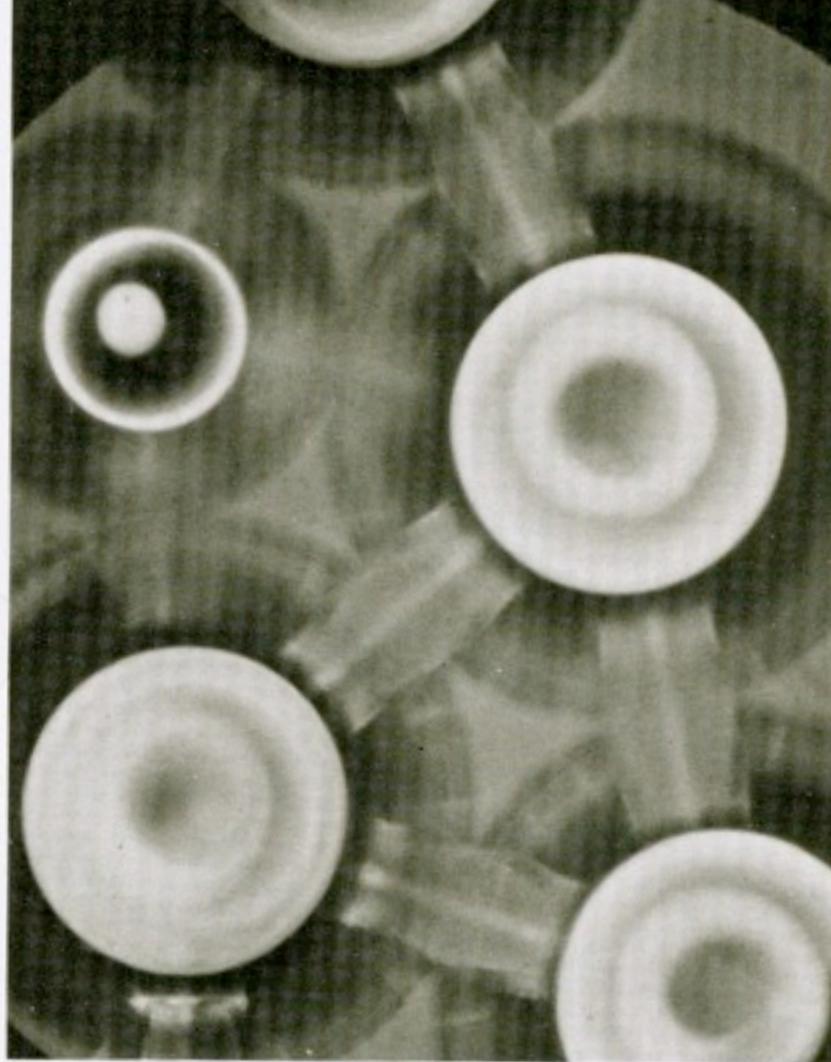

In 1955 Dr. Elmer Nemes developed a powerful light-source microscope, 60 times greater than the Rife Universal Microscope, that saw down to the atomic level. Achieving magnifications between 3,500,000 and 5,000,000, Dr. Nemes could see the lines of force (energy) between nucleate cores. See picture A. (Next Page)

The picture is the polio virus taken through the Nemescope. With electron microscopes you do not see internal structures but black and white shading and shadows. You definitely cannot see living organisms since they are placed within a vacuum and bombarded by electrons. Under the Nemescope and Rife Microscopes one could watch living organisms for as long as needed. In fact, the Nemescope required no special preparations of the specimen, no staining.

Through the Nemescope pictures were taken of the cancer virus as well other viruses associated with different medical conditions.

Raphael's famous picture, The School of Athens, has always been a favorite of mine. Raphael's depiction of the great women and men of philosophy, placed in this magnificent temple setting has always inspired me to continue to be universal in my thinking throughout the day.

Most notable, besides Raphael painting himself into the picture, is Plato and Aristotle located in the center of the picture.

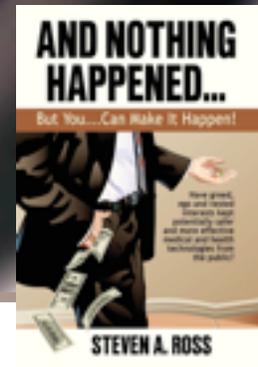

Aristotle was frustrated that Plato would not give specific delineated directions to a goal. Plato would state the goal but not any specific manner to reach that goal. If we were to imagine traveling to a far location around the world. Perhaps Aristotle would want to know the exact path to reach that spot. Plato would have informed us that the spot exists and realized that there are numerous pathways and means to reach it. Aristotle would want to know just how far it is. Upon being told it was 5,000 miles he might inquire as to what a mile consists of. Upon being told how many yards there are in a mile he might inquire as to what a yard consists of. Upon being told that a yard is made up of so many feet, he might inquire what a foot consists of. Then down to inches until he was so engrossed with his nose on the ground determining centimeters that he might forget the picture of the original destination.

Of course I am being a bit facetious but I hope the point is made. You can continue to examine something until you lose sight of the total picture or goal.

ALTHOUGH I RELATE MORE TO PLATO AND UNIVERSALS I HAVE FOUND THE SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERIES, MADE THROUGH TWO SUPER-MICROSCOPES, ALLOWS ME TO MORE ACCURATELY PICTURE THE GRANDEUR OF THE UNIVERSE.

Conscious Connections in Clothing

The world's greatest civilizations have been exposed to the cycle of human intelligence and experiences. What was the perfect solution for an era was questioned, debated and scrutinized in another era of that country and the world. There remained a balance between the fast and the slow, high technology to low technology around life.

"Time flies when you are having fun".

Every country of the world had its own system of consciousness to keep its flora and fauna, its rivers and mountains, its human and animal population in perfect tuning for a harmonious living. With the advent of technology, information and super human intelligence came the use, over use and abuse of certain resources there by creating depletions and piling up of residues.

The world stuck in fast forward and obsessed with speed, with doing everything faster, with cramming more and more into less and less time. Every moment of the day feels like a race against the clock. Carrie Fisher (2004) says "These days even instant gratification takes too long." We try to make things better by speeding them up, so we used to dial; now we speed dial. We used to read; now we speed read. We used to walk; now we speed walk. And even things that are by their very nature slow we try and speed them up too like speed yoga (Carl Honoré, 2004).

In the process of speed, technology and manufacturing more and more for cheaper products and sourcing all across the globe the process has lost the conscious connections of the artisans, weavers and tailors. Consumers are picking up products which are more convenient easy to handle and wear, cheaper as they are mass manufactured and ending up with goods with no human emotion and soul to it. Handmade textiles and garments are losing ground for lack of speed, technology, mass production, uniformity, and price.

The history of textiles is not new as spinning and weaving of cotton was to the Harrappans, nearly five million years ago, and references to weaving are found in the Vedic literature. Various techniques of weaving, designing, needlework etc have survived through the centuries. The foundations of the Indian textile trade with other countries began as early as the second century BC. Before the introduction of mechanized means of spinning in the early 19th century, all Indian cottons and silks were hand spun and hand woven, a highly popular fabric, called the Khadi. Today, cotton is an integral part of textiles in India.

...conscious connection
to the artisans, weavers
and tailors ...

We have similar stories of the finest of cottons of Dhaka muslins and the silken treasure of himru. The Indian traditions, arts and crafts and product evolution and manufacturing were all in a loop; connected with the spiritual core of the society. With mass manufacturing, came the metal and process disintegration called assembly line, which killed the connection of the artisan to the complete product. The operator, most of the times, doesn't even know how the final finished product would look like. With un-fair trade practices all around the globe, the connection with the product seems all the more disconnected.

The stories and poetry of textile dyeing are once again steeped in ancient South Asian texts, literature and poetry. Kabir the weaver-poet wrote that God was the Supreme and General Dyer in the colours of life.

The art of natural dyeing has come full circle – essentially due to the bans being imposed on synthetic dyes by European Governments. As a result of health risks from synthetic dyes, there is a new interest in natural dyes. Once again the ancient textiles and dyers of South Asia are coming back to haunt the modern day textiles. This is evident from the discovery of a dyer's workshop at Mohenjodaro. Indigofera Tinctoria, the most fabled, ancient plant for the indigo dye also grew in abundance on the banks of River Indus.

The essence of the natural colours is that are brilliant without being brash, they invite the eye and do not tire it out, they blend, compliment and contrast one another in the way of a garden of flowers: nothing can be out of place, because they are all created in Gods Garden.(Cheryl Kolander)

At this vital point in the history it is apt to promote our weaving traditions for low carbon foot print product, cutting the supply chain to the shortest possible route, making it a part of the green earth practices. This will keep the rural population in rural goodness without migrating into cities to choke them for employment and living opportunities.

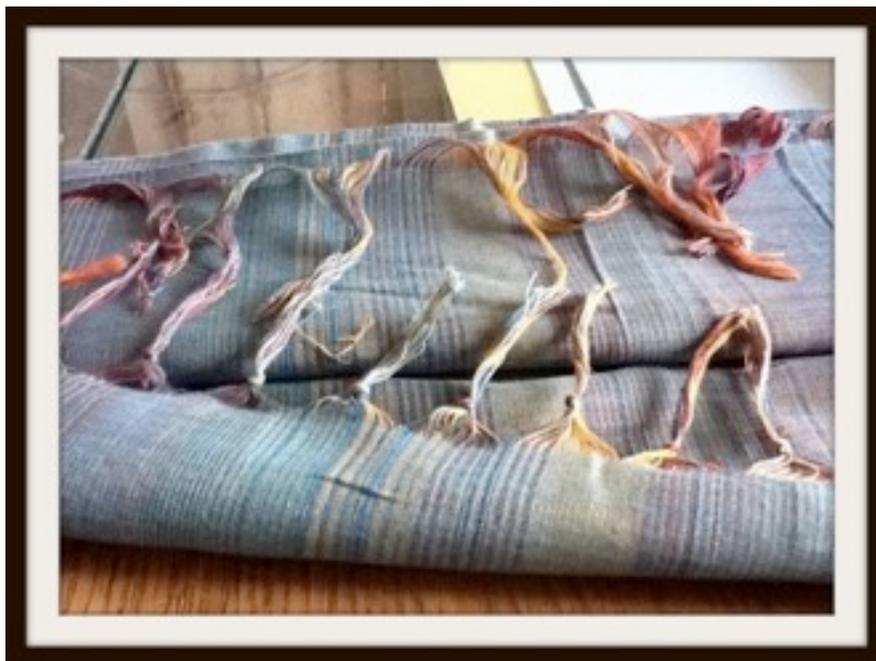

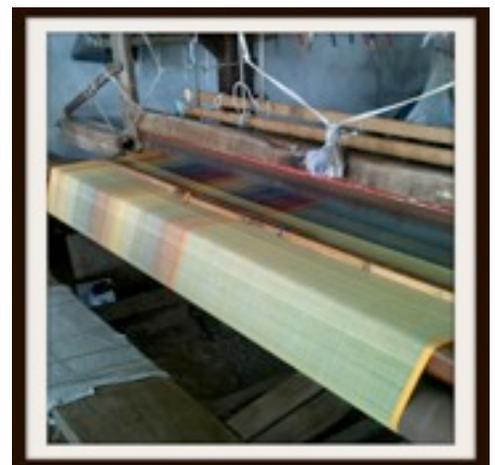

The rural population deserves to be in the best environment suited for them as it nurtures their being and also to take care of the rural lands and agriculture which will sustain with the help of all the other activities around it holding on a core sustainable society. It also important that the urban supports the activities of the rural in the rural so that they can maintain a balance in the semi urban and urban without too much pressure for resources and livelihoods.

This research carved a niche on a sustainable lifestyle, providing conscious and responsible consumers with casually elegant, contemporary/traditional 100% organic cotton fiber, dyed in 100% natural extracts, using controlled water in all process of dyeing.

Consciousness is the quality or state of being aware of an external object or something within oneself. It has been defined as: subjectivity, awareness, sentience, the ability to experience or to feel, wakefulness, having a sense of selfhood, and the executive control system of the mind. Despite the difficulty in definition, many philosophers believe that there is a broadly shared underlying intuition about what consciousness is.

With rural artisans as partners from the state of Andhra Pradesh, India this research is a sustainable fair trade model to replicate in various craft sectors not just in India but around the world.

Heritage - this is about the continuation of the trend which is all about craftsmanship and about art of living

Oracle - This is more about an escape; a theme that's artistic and decorative

Perspective - is about the 1990s minimalism, low tech design

Exo Tech - is all about exoticism and technique a green attitude which is much more technological than before

The materials were prepared by a process of cleansing called detoxification. It is mentioned in the Vedas that stotras when chanted in the right way, are capable of detoxifying any material and provide positive energy to it. In this study music was used to detox the water and yarn. Music (Stotras) from the Vedas was used in a particular sequence for every procedure.

Aditya Hrydayam, Totakashtakam, Lalitha Sahasranamam and Kanakadhara Stotram were played on the audio for Detoxing. Aditya Hrydayam is possibly the greatest one addressed to the Sun god as he is the source of all energy for existence and growth of flora and fauna. Totakashtakam was composed by Giri one of the disciples of Shri Adi Shankara. The enlightened Giri composed extempore Totakashtakam in praise of his Guru Adi Shankara. This was picked to salute all the gurus for their blessings in the research. Lalitha Sahasranamam is a text from Brahmanda Purana. It contains a thousand names of the Hindu mother goddess Lalitha. The names are organized in hymns (stotras). It is the only Sahasranamam that does not repeat a single name. This is used to invoke Shakti, spontaneity and easy flow of processes. Kanakadhara Stotram is a popular prayer dedicated to Goddess Lakshmi and was composed by Adi Shankaracharya. This stotram was used to bring in wealth through this research. Wealth in the form of knowledge, wisdom and money for all those who are associated in the supply chain.

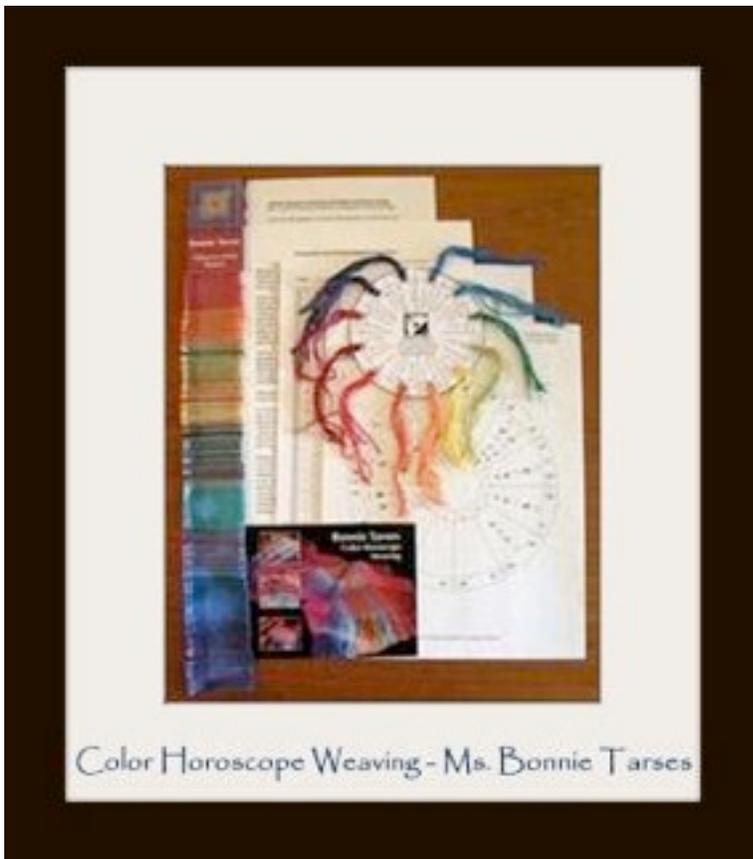

It was woven on hand loom and stitched by master dress makers. Coconut shell button were used for men's shirts.

Women were given a saree with blouse. The Saree pallu was beautifully hand knotted.

Colour Horoscope Weaving

A unique technique of horoscope weaving was used for making the fabric which used the 12 colours of the colour wheel. The fabrics fall under the colour forecast of four different themes for fall/winter 2010-11(Promostyl, 2010).

All the 40 subjects were asked to wear a regular cotton attire and a complete GDV analysis was done with and without filter morning, afternoon and evening.

The customized 100% organic naturally dyed handloom cotton was worn by the subjects and GDV analysis was done with and without filter morning, afternoon and evening the same attire.

The processed data gives endless possibilities for interpretation. Keeping the objectives and scope of this research Projection area was taken as a parameter to show the significant enhancement of energy fields in the subjects post custom clothing.

This research proved that the slow processes imbibed positive energy to the material and the conscious connective processes significantly increased the energy fields of subjects. The weaver and the wearer were in the shortest supply chain bringing in the product with conscious core to the door step of the consumer. This not will make the product land at a fair price to the consumer, it will be empowering the weaving communities with a sustainable craft scenario with ethical business practices flourishing for a better environment for all.

Wholly Human

Earth Project 777 is the evolution of Empirical Awareness for Planet Earth (Gaia) and her human inhabitants as they move forward into their next experience as part of a larger Universal Community.

I came to understand that everyone was encoded with specific pieces of the puzzle and would come together at this particular time in our history to share our stories and see with knowing eyes and heart that we were part of something greater than ourselves. The common thread is our own innate quality as human beings to come together in trust and collaboration. We were created to come together to find the solutions.

Our human form is a very complex and extraordinary system of checks and balances carefully designed by our Creator to move us through our life experience in collaboration with others we engage... interdependence. The female was designed with very specific hormones for pro-creation and an abundant supply of a hormone called Oxytocin. It is the very hormone that is stimulated when crisis, chaos or danger arise and brings about a sense within the female to gather those around her and create an environment of safety and calm. It's referred to as the "tend and befriend" hormone and is naturally present within our own human form.

The collaboration between the masculine/feminine was designed to hold the balance...each standing to their individual strengths in support of the other. We find that the collaborative process has diminished within our interactions with one another as we became more independent and less interdependent. We found it more difficult to trust in the Absolutes that were given In the Beginning and that presented a roadblock in our desire for unity/community.

“A professor at Claremont Graduate University in Southern California, Zak believes most humans are biologically wired to cooperate, when oxytocin levels are high in subjects, people’s generosity to strangers increases up to 80 percent; and countries with higher levels of trust – lower crime, better education – fare better economically.

He says: “Civilization is dependent on oxytocin. You can’t live around people you don’t know intimately unless you have something that says: Him I can trust, and this one I can’t trust.” - http://www.ted.com/talks/paul_zak_trust_morality_and_oxytocin.html”

But wait...there’s more!

“Oxytocin is the brain’s naturally occurring hormone of “tend and befriend” (Healing Heartache, Sept. 2008), the molecule of motherly love and attachment (The Neurobiology of Feeling Unlovable, Feb. 2009), the neuropeptide of safety and trust that is the direct and immediate antidote to “fight-flight-freeze.” (Stress and Trauma, March 2009)

The fast-track way is through touch and warmth. Because there are neural cells around the heart, placing our hand on our heart and breathing deeply into our heart center activates the parasympathetic nervous system and begins to calm down the fight-flight arousal of the sympathetic nervous system. Because the vagus nerve connects the heart, lungs and gut with the cortex (our “higher” brain) placing our hand on our heart primes our brain to activate the release of oxytocin in the brain. Oxytocin is the neurochemical antidote to the cortisol that fuels the “fight-flight-freeze” response to any perceived threat or danger. When oxytocin cascades through our bloodstream, the calming parasympathetic branch of the nervous system puts the brakes on the activating sympathetic branch, quelling the fear response of the amygdala; cortisol levels plummet, blood pressure lowers; all is well. This is all in the sub-cortical limbic system: it does not have to go through conscious processing to happen.”

The collaboration between the masculine/feminine was designed to hold the balance

“Never forget that you are one of a kind. Never forget that if there weren’t any need for you in all your uniqueness to be on this earth, you wouldn’t be here in the first place. And never forget, no matter how overwhelming life’s challenges and problems seem to be, that one person can make a difference in the world.”

In fact, it is always because of one person that all the changes that matter in the world come about. So be that one person. ”

— Richard Buckminster Fuller

Does this mean that our perception of what is taking place can change without the drama we have attached to our need to process everything to make sense of it? Is it simply a matter of perception...good/bad, real/illusion, etc...how we view our world? In other words, can we hear the whisper or do we still require the BIG BANG to get our attention!

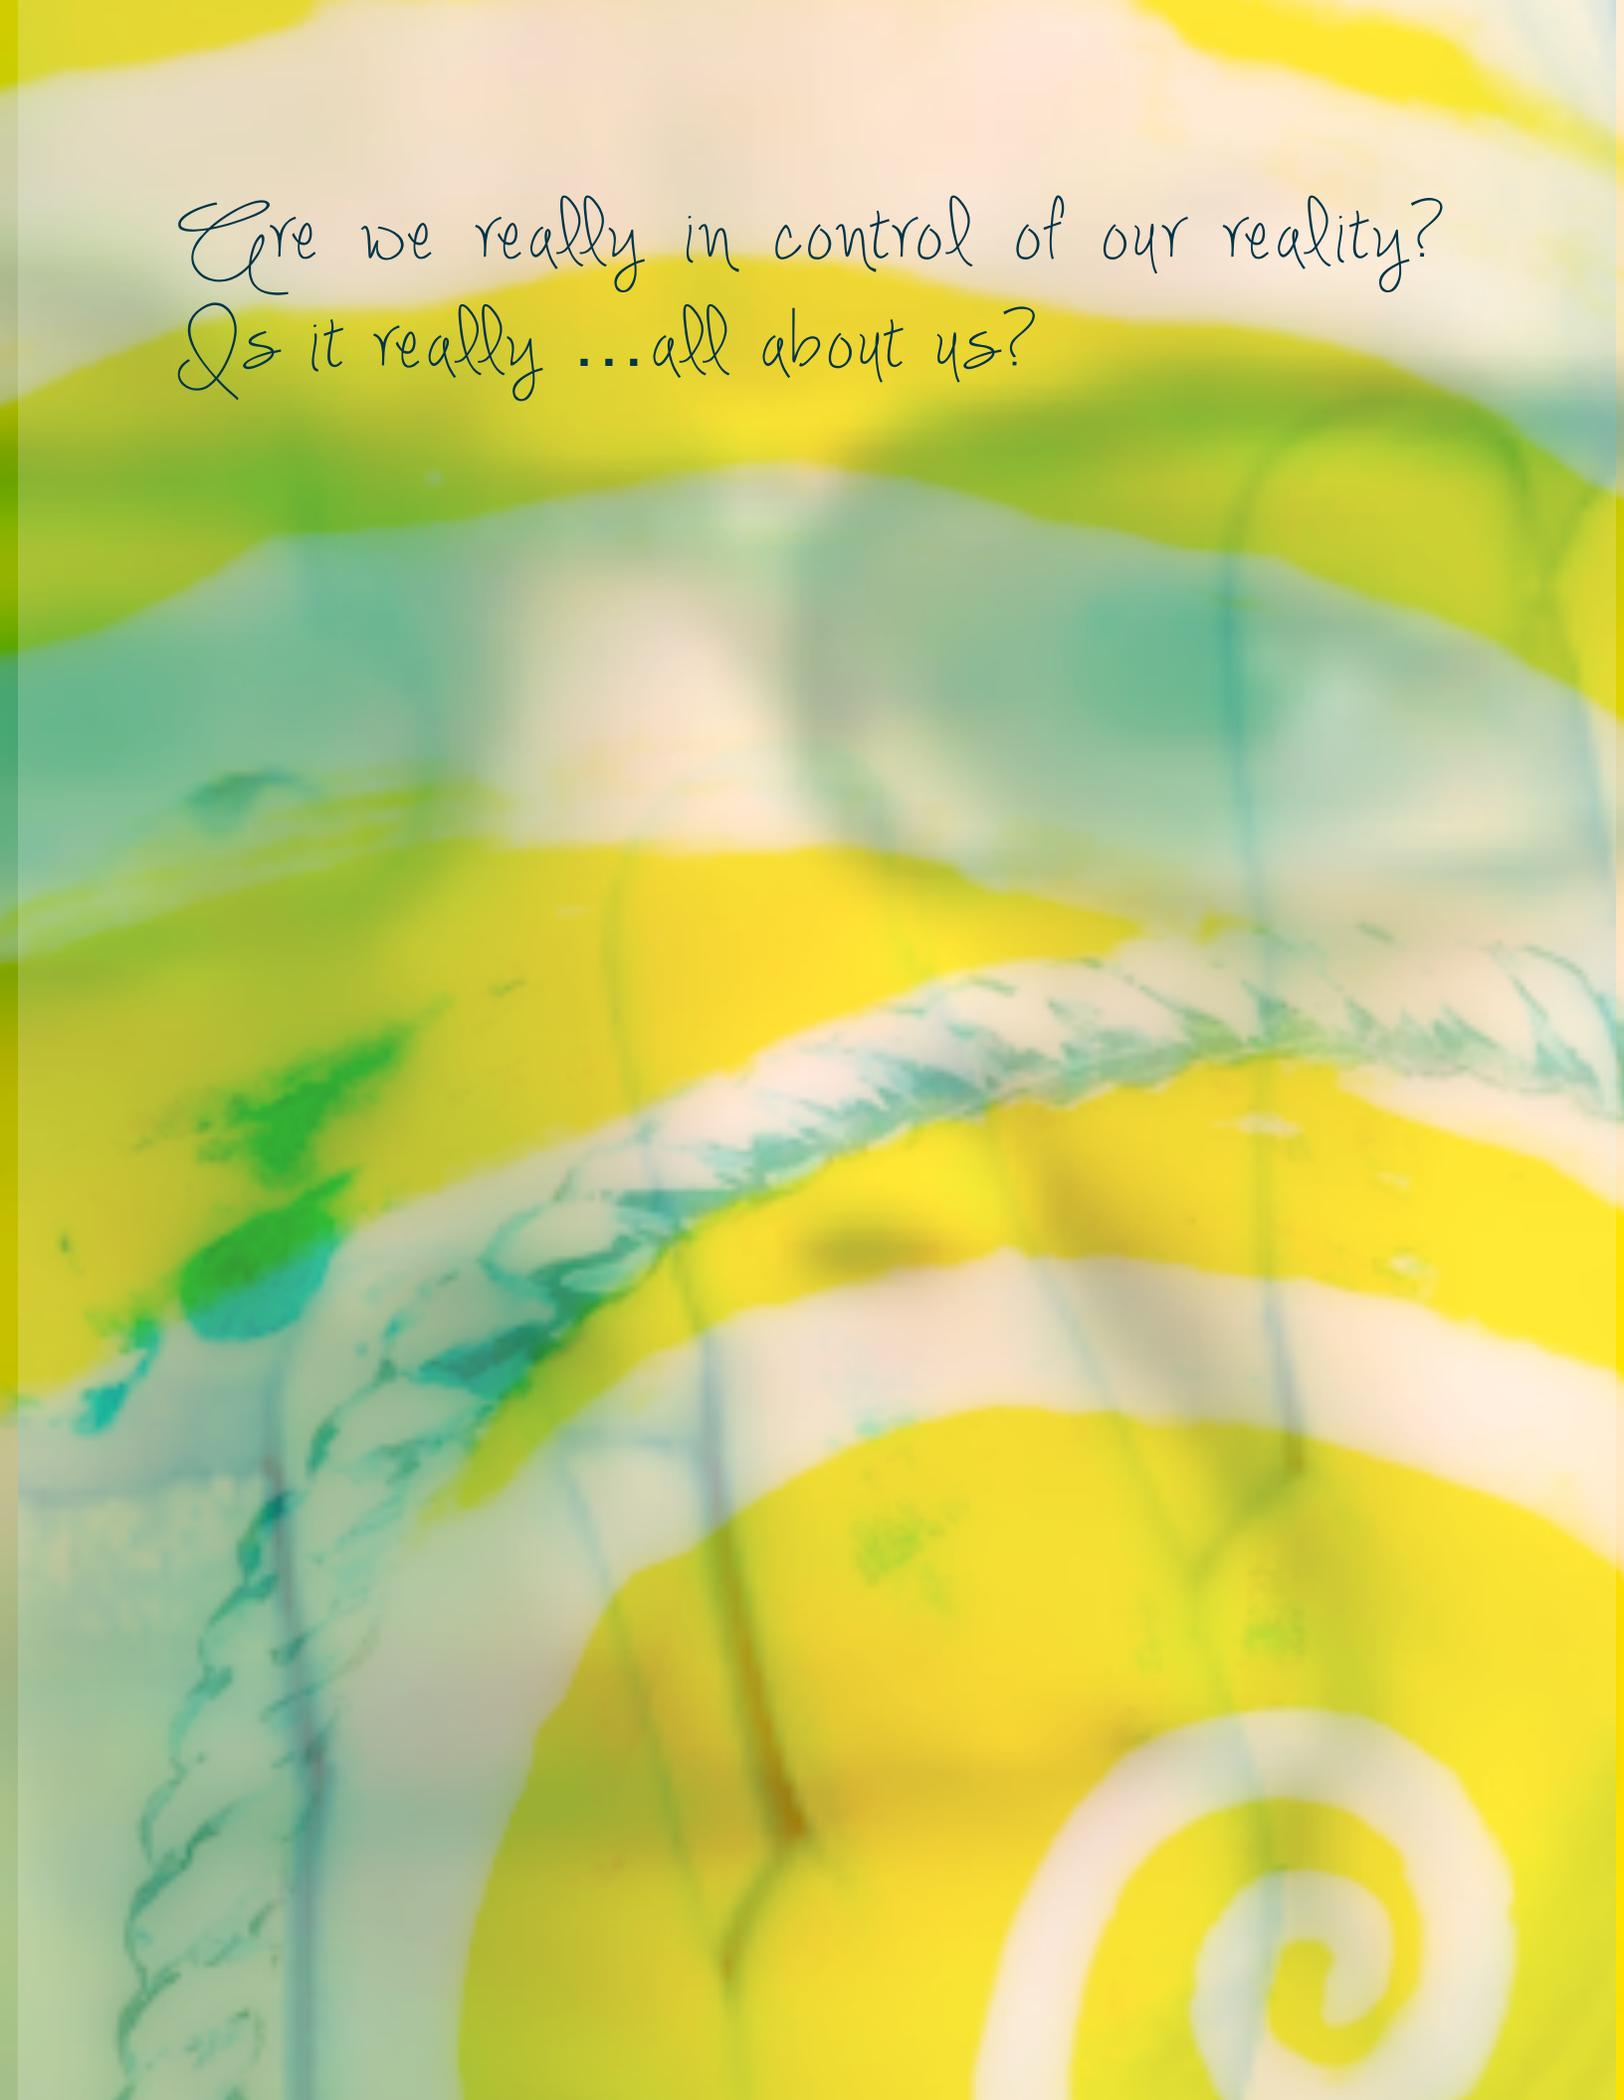

Are we REALLY in control of our reality? Is it REALLY...ALL ABOUT US? Does the FORM/BODY REALLY hold the solution and How might we actually experience and sustain this awareness?

I was beginning to see the significance of The Triad Wave©, the Quiet Miracles API Process, the Reset Breath© and Quiet Touch© in a broader sense...still; I felt there was something missing. Many years of observing my own process, I knew there was a break in how we moved information through our sensory system to be decoded or translated and then sent out for the body to respond. This is where I began to look at esoteric, spiritual, physical and scientific models to discover what was missing. And I had lots of help from some interesting sources over the years as this was precisely what I had stood at the Cosmic Dry Erase Board (<http://earthproject777.com/the-earth-project/>) and signed up to share.

Still, I had more questions...

We originally operated from a primitive part of the brain known as the reptilian brain. Information from our multi-sensory system determined what was happening within our environment and a signal was sent to which the body responded. Generally it was to run from the danger that was present. Not as uncommon as you might think as it is the very system that allowed the elephants to run for higher ground long before the tsunami hit. The human being also has this multi-sensory capability though it has long been disregarded in most as we subscribe to the theory that "if we can't see it, hear it, smell it, taste it or touch it...it does not exist." As we evolved, the reptilian brain was to work in concert/collaboration with the new development of understanding and when we determined there was no danger, we would remain in rest. Times have changed dramatically since the days of caves and dinosaurs and we now find ourselves in a world of constant distractions and drama of a different kind. How might we respond to the stress of these distractions without adversely affecting the physical and creating more disease?

Are we really in control of our reality?
Is it really ...all about us?

We have arrived at the possibility to become Wholly Human (<http://blog.earthproject777.com/?p=326>) having access to our most developed area of discernment and reasoning along with the potential to focus our attention more directly rather than constantly being distracted or entrained to disharmonic stimuli...in other words, fully utilizing our Divine Intelligence. At the present time, most of us continue to process and define our experience based upon past emotional drama/trauma that leaves us in a place of still running from danger to survive.

Once again, J.C. Pearce provides a clear process of why this exists and how we might better understand why we continue to behave in this manner upsetting the physical system of information sharing and leaving us confused and experiencing illness. The development process of the brain was not designed to work separately...it was designed to work in concert or collaboration with the knowledge held within the whole. There's that word again...collaboration.

“Each stage must incorporate and expand the previous stage creating a “loop”. This “looping” is a bending back upon, analyzing and changing any experience. Each stage is dependent upon the “looping” to fully utilize the capabilities of each new system in order to reach the highest stage – frontal and prefrontal cortex. If the “looping” or interdependence does not occur, we will replicate anomalies resulting in the dysfunctional culture that cannot self-correct or even be corrected.

A critical series of interacting loops take place between these evolutionary brain parts- moving forward, doubling back to pick up elements or capabilities needed – but unavoidable until such movement forward and doubling back takes place.

History has shown there is nothing more dangerous and destructive than a brilliant, genius-level reptile... In other words...our highest evolutionary brain is in service to our lowest, sensory-motor survival system.

There were others who were aware of something that was to be introduced to assist in the raising of our awareness during this time. In 1994, I was handed a white book by a very tall man outside a little bookstore in San Anselmo, California. “This is for you,” he said as he walked away. The book was The Keys of Enoch by J.J. Hurtak. Many years later, as I moved further into my understanding of the work I was bringing forward, I saw that in 1977, Hurtak had predicted not only the “wave” but also a “visual” presentation that would be created from the mathematics of the wave sequencing. The reference to Hurtak’s work was shared in an article for Spirit of Maat in 2008 and can be found on the Earth Project website at <http://earthproject777.com/the-pathway-to-navigating-the-now-2/>

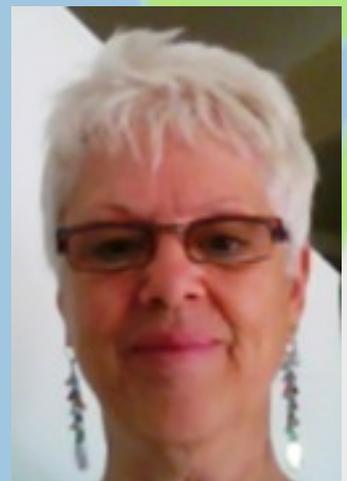

It is often difficult to take that giant leap of faith. To leave the familiar even when you know you have outgrown it and open to the possibilities offered by the unknown. It means taking a risk and trusting in your inner knowing. In 2005, I found myself in Colorado... standing face-to-face with Slim Spurling. It was like looking into the familiar eyes of the Merlin. That was a strange thought because what stood in front of me was not the image of Merlin. It was, instead, a very tall, skinny cowboy in Jeans. He had a long beard and smelled of coffee and cigarettes. Still, there was something about him that commanded attention...so I stayed and we began to talk.

He puts me in touch with his extended network and introduces the wave to his group who work with his harmonizers. Slim linked me into his network, validated the significance of the work I was about and joined me in exploring possibilities I would not have discovered alone. He was the first to coin the word bio-acoustic in relationship to the wave. “From the research I have done or from direct contact with others who have done excellent experimental work, it appears that the waveforms, timing and amplitude of Brenda’s Triad Wave link into one or more portions of the gravity standing wave spectrum (Dr. Helmut Muller, Global Scaling.” These words are part of an email he shared with his network on April 10, 2006.

When our thoughts, words and actions do not match, we create a disharmonic within our personal field...

"It is often difficult to take that giant leap of faith. To leave the familiar even when you know you have outgrown it and open to the possibilities offered by the unknown."

The answers to my questions were being more clearly defined as the research and methods to observe were advancing. There are many ways to arrive at a solution to what is present in our lives at any given moment. Whether we are talking about our personal experience, a corporate environment, a medical group, an educational facility or any number of other venues, the common thread is the human component and how it moves in a resonance field with the vision that has been created. We know we are here to create a new reality without the anomalies that currently exist. In order to do that, we must begin with the one thing we all have in common...we are human beings in varying stages of development... living on a big blue/green ball called Earth in the middle of space. When we think or speak words, we create motion within our personal field of existence that creates motion with the greater field of existence.

When our thoughts, words and actions do not match, we create a dis-harmonic within our personal field as well as the greater field of existence. Each of us holds the key or solution to what is occurring at this very moment...and we have the potential to make the changes we long to see. Our one chance to evolve as a collective is that we begin to take personal responsibility for our thoughts, words and actions and use the many “tools” available to assist us.

I do not profess to have all the answers, nor the only solution...just one possibility that was given for this particular time in our history...The Triad Wave and the Quiet Miracles Process. The resonant field of unlimited possibilities is unfolding in amazing ways. The solutions we seek are here. We are the solution. After all...IT'S All About Us... Working together, beginning with the basic tools from my toolbox and the Quiet Miracles API Process, we will reveal the wisdom held within your own body – your Divine Physical Form - with you at all times and providing a roadmap to guide you through your life experience to realize your own Quiet Miracles.

THE TRIAD WAVE©

The Triad Wave© is a simple sine wave series, digitally mastered and below the level of human hearing, to awaken the very multi-sensory system that we require as we move into our next evolutionary process of discernment within the pre-frontal cortex and beyond. It moves with the ever-changing resonance within the Schumann cavity rather than a static frequency or vibration allowing our human form and sensory system to move in resonance with the planet upon which we reside. In addition, it is a carrier of information as our multi-sensory system assimilates signals from its many sensory receptors and moves it through the brain for interpretation or decoding. Since it is perpetual motion and constantly collecting information, there is the ability to move through the brain building upon each and collecting the data required to give us more accurate information. J. C. Pearce refers to this as “looping”...I have long called it the “fold-over” as I would explain the process of how I understood the “wave” to work. If this constant interface between all components does not occur in all experience, we revert back to old patterns and the process of evolution or pre-frontal discernment does not take place. This is where the Triad Wave comes in for it keeps thought or sensory input moving through all stages and the interaction can be maintained thereby moving out of the entrainment of pre-determined thought.

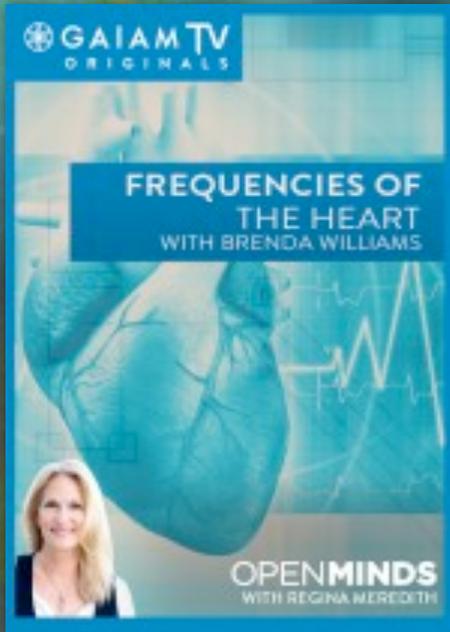

The Quiet Miracles API Process is a participatory experiential to learn the Reset Breath© and Quiet Touch©. The Reset Breath signals the brain that a change is requested. Quiet Touch creates the electro-magnetic connection that signals the release of oxytocin as well as connecting the heart, the brain within the heart and the brain/data base to respond at the highest level of understanding.

The Triad Wave© was given as a gift to humanity, a universal foundation or building block upon which to begin the creation of a New Reality of collaboration, inclusion and trust. The Quiet Miracles API Process© provides the resonance and sustainability for individuals to engage at their highest level utilizing both their Divine Human Form and Divine Intelligence as it was originally designed...In The Beginning.

A GIFT TO HUMANITY

Imagine a frequency, emanating from the silent place in our hearts, reminding us of our capabilities and overriding the programs that keep us asleep. This frequency has captured the attention of many. THE GIFT OF HIGHER CONSCIOUSNESS CAME TO ME AT A VERY DIFFICULT TIME IN MY LIFE.

By Ted Kuntz M.Ed

I believe we are guided by an essence with a higher wisdom. I'm uncertain whether this essence is my own higher consciousness, or that of another being that is benevolent and committed to my success. The distinction may be irrelevant. What is relevant is my ability and willingness to listen to the messages provided by this higher consciousness. These messages are often subtle and require a certain level of stillness in order to hear what is being offered.

I've received messages of a higher consciousness on two occasions. On both occasions I was in a state of angst and despair and found the offered wisdom life changing. I'd like to share with you one of those occasions in the hope this may enable you to hear the gifts of wisdom that are being sent your way.

“WHAT WOULD DO THE MOST GOOD?”

Suddenly, without any conscious intention on my part, a voice entered my consciousness. I confess that it was not me who was responsible for this voice. It was too foreign and unfamiliar.

The gift of higher consciousness came to me at a very difficult time in my life. My daughter Lani was moving into her adolescent power. On this particular evening, Lani decided to exercise this power by ignoring her curfew.

At the time my life was full of stress and tension as a consequence of having a young son with severe medical challenges. Josh had been neurologically damaged by a routine vaccine shot and developed an uncontrolled seizure disorder. As a result, his mother and I had to deal with his seizures many times per day. The decision of my fourteen year old to disregard her curfew was more than I could manage that evening.

I sat in the darkened living room of our home waiting for her return. As the minutes turned into hours I became increasingly anxious, angry and resentful.

“What is she thinking?” I ranted in my mind. “How could she do this to her mother and me? “Doesn’t she know we have enough on our plates with her brother being sick?” “Doesn’t she care?”

I vacillated between confusion and anger, and from concern to fear. I conjured up all kinds of stories and images to feed my negativity. With each dark thought, I could feel the rage growing inside me.

I imagined all the things I would say and do when my daughter arrived home. Most of the thoughts and actions were painful expressions of my anger, resentment, disappointment and hurt.

Suddenly, without any conscious intention on my part, a voice entered my consciousness. I confess that it was not me who was responsible for this voice. It was too foreign and unfamiliar. It was too unlike me. The message stood in stark contrast to the uncontrolled venting I was undertaking at the time. With absolute clarity, I heard the following question in my mind:

“TED, OF ALL THE THINGS YOU COULD DO WHEN YOUR DAUGHTER COMES HOME, WHAT WOULD DO THE MOST GOOD?”

I must admit I was caught completely off-guard by the question. In fact, I had never even considered this kind of question before. Until that moment, I had lived my life as if I had no choice in the kind of action I might take in highly charged circumstances such as this. Somehow it was as if my emotions justified whatever actions followed.

As I sat there in that darkened room I began to consider the question that had been asked of me by some unknown agent. I reviewed the range of actions I might take when my daughter eventually arrived home. And as I considered each action, I held it up to the criteria I had been invited to consider: “Would this action do the most good?”

As I ran through the options in my head, and considered the likely consequences of each, it became apparent to me that most of the actions I had spent the evening ruminating on were unacceptable.

I began to consider other options. I thought of actions based in forgiveness and love. I pondered the possibility of expressing gratitude that my daughter was home safe. I weighed the possibility of acceptance, rather than resentment.

I began to feel my heart opening to the love I felt for my daughter. As I connected with these subtle sensations in my body, I knew my heart was affirming that these more sensible actions would do the most good.

Within minutes of my declared intention to express gratitude, acceptance and love my daughter came through the door. With hindsight, I laugh thinking that this same essence must have been coaching my daughter too and had finally whispered to her: "It's time to go home. Your dad is finally ready."

When Lani came into the house, I wrapped my arms around her small adolescent body and hugged her tightly. With warmth and sincerity, I said – "Lani, I'm glad you're safe and I'm glad your home. I love you."

This one experience with my daughter taught me something that will be with me forever. What transpired that evening was an awakening inside me that reinforced my capacity to choose – in each and every moment. Until then, I allowed whatever emotion was the most intense to determine my response.

Once I received this gift from this unknown essence, I made a silent vow to live my life in a completely different way – to live with choice; to live as a creative being; to take responsibility for my actions and my thoughts

I realize now that whenever I am confronted with the challenges that life can present, I can choose to pause and consider the thought, "What action of mine would do the most good?"

Imagine how our world would be transformed if we all lived this way. What if each one of us took the time to pause - especially in times of difficulty - and ask the question, "What action of mine would do the most good?" I feel certain that this thought and the other messages of wisdom offered to us have the potential to change us and our world.

THE HOLY UNIVERSE - A NEW STORY OF CREATION FOR HEART, SOUL & SPIRIT

The Holy Universe: A New Story of Creation For The Heart, Soul, and Spirit breathes life into the cold, mechanistic worldview of the Universe, transforming our physical history into a living story—and provides us with powerful insights into navigating the global ecological, social, and spiritual crises now facing our world, and provocatively argues the crises we face today just might be the best thing that ever happened to humanity. The book invites us into the dialogue between Seeker and Sage as they explore the unfolding of the Universe.

Josh del Sol

Producer & Director,
Take Back Your Power

The new independent film, by Josh del Sol, "Take Back your Power" is not just a sting on Smart Meters but it unveils the attempt of "BIG BROTHER" to monopolize the worlds electrical grid and hence take total control of EVERY & ALL aspects of your life.

All systems run on electricity, including your body. By this, there will be NOTHING they don't have on or over you!

So "SMART"

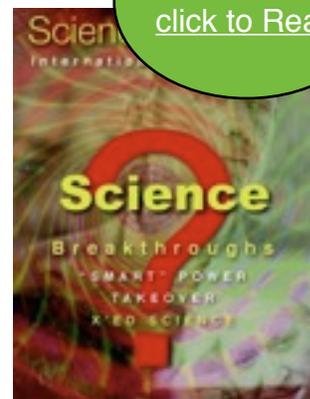

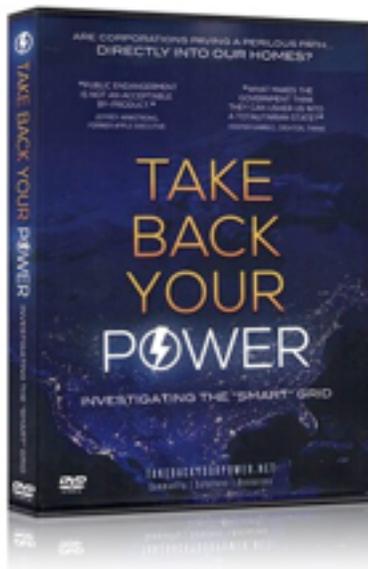

it meters, measures, monitors, and controls your energy, money, heat, health, and communications. The extra bonus, it has surveillance capabilities.

ONE GRID

"This "smart meter" is designed to attached to EVERY house globally ..." to this:

"Did you know: You are not legally required to accept a "smart" meter - which violate numerous existing laws."

"EMPOWER YOURSELF WITH SOLUTIONS:"

As world events speed up and crises multiply, from tsunamis to radiation, to wars, and to economic collapse, we focus on external preparations to weather the storms ahead. As vital as this is, we can't afford to ignore the inner preparation. Amid the painful unraveling of the world as we have known it, we can utilize countless threads of ancient wisdom in order to live resiliently, find meaning and purpose in our predicament, and reweave new garments of individual and cultural wholeness.
